problems with a urine collection system which failed to dump their waste overboard as planned.

They continued to work with the problem for almost an hour past the scheduled beginning of their eight-hour sleep period, which was to start at 11:15 p.m. Mission Control said the astronauts could sleep an extra 40 minutes Wednesday morning to make up for the loss of rest.

The successful day in space began at 7:20 a.m. CDT when Soviet cosmonauts Alexei Leonov and Valeri Kubasov were drilled into orbit from the Baikonur Cosmodrome in a stark desert in central Russia.

The Americans' ride into space was broadcast live via an on-board television camera, a space first. A similar attempt by the Russians failed when a camera on board the Soviet spacecraft malfunctioned.

But for the first time in history, a Soviet countdown and launch was broadcast live to the Russian people and to the world.

Cosmonauts Leonov and Kubasov became space-flying television repairmen when the Soviet control center read them a long list of troubleshooting instructions for their cranky television camera.

"We understand," said Leonov. "It'll take a little time, but we understand."

Moscow mission control also said the cosmonauts experienced more acceleration force at liftoff than expected.

Two and one-half hours after the American launch, the astronauts unlatched their spacecraft from the spent booster. They spun the craft around and docked with an airlock housed in the rocket hull.

The astronauts then backed out, carrying on the nose of their spaceship the black metal tunnel that will be the path to space union for the spacemen of the two countries.

The vital docking and extraction of the airlock tunnel — called a docking module — was performed with no difficulty by the American astronauts.

Pure elation crept into the voices of the usually calm astronauts as Apollo streaked into a 95- by 105-mile orbit.

Some of the first words Stafford spoke after launch were in Russian: "Mee nahodimsia na orbite (we are in orbit.)"

"The liftoff was smooth as silk," said one of the astronauts.

Mission control reported a brief dropout of data from the Apollo command ship, but Stafford reported everything was fine on board and the craft sped on into orbit.

The Soviet cosmonauts were told of the successful Apollo launch and were quoted as saying, "We heartily congratulate (the astronauts), but the main event of the Soyuz-Apollo flight is still ahead of us."

The Americans will guide their spacecraft through a series of rocket firings in a classic celestial chase toward rendezvous on Thursday with the Soviet craft. The Soviet spacemen carried a United Nations flag aloft which they will present to the Americans during the linkup to bring back to earth.

As the spacecraft soared upward, the Soviet control center reported a "slight overload," referring to a greater than expected acceleration force. The cosmonauts replied that "overloads are insignificant."

Later, the cosmonauts said one of four TV cameras aboard the spaceship was not functioning.

Union-Fieldhouse Pact May Be Crumbling

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

No sooner was the month-long strike on construction of the University of Nebraska Fieldhouse settled when the agreement showed signs of crumbling.

Shortly before noon Tuesday, Harley Schrader, director of the university's physical plant, announced that working hours for the striking union and the nonunion workers had been rearranged.

Then Tuesday afternoon, Albert Tritsch, spokesman for the Operating Engineers Local 571, said he doesn't think the time schedule worked out "will be feasible for very long."

Schrader said the Operating Engineers would be on the job from 6 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and the nounion T & M Construction Co. crew would come on at 2:30 p.m. and work until dark.

Won't Work Together

Apparently the union people do not want to work next to nonunion people, Schrader said. Pickets at the site have protested that T & M workers do not have the same wages, hours and conditions that union workers are guaranteed, he said.

Tritsch said he foresees problems with the working arrangement. One contractor often needs the other contractor to complete a phase of the work before the next phase can be started, he explained.

"With contractors working different shifts, that kind of interaction isn't possible," he said.

Another problem with the return-to-work agreement, Tritsch pointed out, is that the union's contract is for work between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Outside those hours, the university "either will have to pay overtime or work something else out . . . as far as I'm concerned."

'Solved To A Degree'

Roy Godwin, business manager for the Plumbers and Steamfitters Local 88, concurred with Tritsch, saying that the strike has been "solved to a degree."

He said that to his knowledge the university has not agreed to pay time and a half for work done between 6 a.m. and 8 a.m.

"A lot will depend on the men, whether they are willing to work six hours a day (8 a.m. to 2.30 p.m.) rather than not work at all," he said. "I don't believe they'll work after T & M comes on the job.

"We're going to talk with our executive board and also with the Mechanical Contractors Assocation to see if we can come to terms for this particular job.

"We want to make sure this is not a situation that could occur in the future," Godwin said. "We consider this a 'special problem.' "

Jerry Cratsenberg, a spokesman for Electrical Workers IBEW Local 265, said electricians for the fieldhouse "didn't go in this morning until 8 a.m."

The electricians' contract also calls for 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. working hours, he said.

No Overtime

"No way" will the university pay overtime on construction at the fieldhouse, said Schrader.

"The unions contracted for a job to get done and if the workmen aren't willing to give a little . . . it's going to drag on and on.

"We'll just have to do what we can to move the project along and hope the unions will relinquish some of their rules and go back to work."

Schrader admitted that the unions "didn't agree entirely" to the proposed working hours but said the university "decided to try it to see if some of the unions wouldn't change their attitudes some.

"They've come up with nothing else so I don't know what they want," Schrader said. He urged union representatives to "come forth with proposals of their own."

Completion Unlikely

At any rate, Schrader said he doubts the fieldhouse will be completed in time for the start of the '75-'76 basketball season.

However, he did say it's possible some of the games scheduled later in the season could be in the new fieldhouse, but whether athletic officials "will decide to do that I don't know."

It would be a "tremendous problem" to get tickets out for the new facility and change seating arrangements for those with tickets for the old Coliseum, he noted.

Egypt Says It'll Reject Peace Force Extension

By The Associated Press

Egypt declared Tuesday it will reject any extension of the United Nations peacekeeping force mandate in the Sinai Desert when the mandate expires July 24 unless there is movement toward a peace agreement.

Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy told a Cairo news conference that "Israel has profited from the relative prevailing quiet to further its occupation rather than to assist the efforts aimed at achieving a lasting peace." Egypt had agreed to the last three-month extension "to afford peace every possible chance," he said.

Israel has been seeking a six-month extension.

U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, in Minneapolis, Minn., for a speaking engagement, told reporters it was his "impression" that Egypt's refusal to extend the mandate die not mean the U.N. forces would have to pull out July 24. But he added that Egypt's declaration calls "attention to the urgency of the problem . . . of working out some new interim solution in the Middle East."

Fahmy made a different interpretation of the U.N. mandate at his Cairo conference. He was asked if the United Nations units could remain without a mandate and replied "Absolutely not. The force cannot remain without a mandate."

Fahmy said that Egypt "will see to it that Israel will be checked in such a manner to force it to reconsider its own arrogant and expansionist policies in the area."

Asked if this meant war, Fahmy replied, "Don't jump to conclusions. There are several ways to check Israel's behavior" and he mentioned economic sanctions as one possibility.

Israeli officials in Jerusalem viewed Egypt's refusal to extend the life of the U.N. peace force as a move to win greater concessions in talks for a Sinai agreement.

The Israeli Foreign Ministry declined comment pending a study of Fahmy's statement, but one government official said Israel does not see the July 24 expiration as a deadline on negotiations for further Israeli troop withdrawals. "We do not make any connection between the mandate and the negotiations for an interim agreement," he said.

The board discussed acquiring the campus, after it was offered for sale to SeTech Area President Robert S. Eicher by University of Nebraska Foundation President Harry Haynie. The foundation accepted Pershing as an unconditional gift last December. Haynie set no firm price, but tentatively mentioned $2 million, Eicher said.

"My first reaction" to Haynie's inquiry, Eicher said, "was 'That's strange. If we had pursued the thing with any vigor, we could probably have acquired it for free, the same as the university.' "

NU was reported as the intended recipient of Pershing, which may accept the campus free under its special arrangement with the foundation. The latter still holds title, but NU's interest has flagged.

Most of the board members opposed acquiring Pershing College. "If it's a gift, maybe we need to talk to somebody," Eicher said.

The college now rents space throughout Lincoln, and has campuses in Fairbury and Milford.

Besides, he added, "We haven't got" $2 million or any sum to spend on a fourth campus. Because Pershing is a "dorm-type campus," Ted Doyle of Fairbury said, "I see no way where we could make use of it (Pershing)."

Lloyd Wright of Reynolds said past legislative studies showed Pershing is unsuitable to adapt to technical training; rather, a "half-way hospital" and community for the elderly would be "very sound reasoning."

Loretta Draper of Plattsmouth said SeTech must consider whether Pershing's close proximity to Lincoln would adequately serve the entire college area. But Nielsen noted half the SeTech students come from Lancaster County. Mrs. Draper also suggested investigating what effect reopening Pershing would have on nearby Peru State College.

More immediately, the board juggled its own financial future, adoting an area property levy of 2.35 mills — 1.35 for 1975-76 operations and one mill for construction.

The combined assessed millage may be up to 2.5, under the 1975 technical community college reorganization bill, LB325. Each mill will generate about $1.3 million in the $5,675,781 SeTech budget, Eicher said. That includes $2,850,000 from the state general fund.

Undercutting Levy

By undercutting the maximum levy allowed, SeTech will incur a year-end deficit of approximately $280,000. But that amount will be covered by delayed tax collections which the college will receive in the next fiscal year.

The intent, Eicher said, is to avoid a large cash carry-over by undertaxing patrons. He and board members admitted a political move in reassessing the levy the Legislature revived after previous local taxation was declared unconstitutional.

Southeast will hold a public hearing on the proposed 2.35-mill levy on July 28 at 7:30 p.m., in the Lincoln campus Bryan Center, 1701 S. 40th.

Four of the other five technical community college areas have proposed higher local levies than Southeast's.

The board also deferred approval of modifying the bond indenture for the Fairbury campus dormitory. The vote was 6-2, with Wright and Earl Kraft of Lincoln voting no.

Senators Vote For Extension Of Controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate acted Tuesday to prevent the abrupt removal of controls from domestic oil prices and to require Detroit to build more efficient cars.

On a 63-21 vote, senators approved a bill subjecting automakers to stiff penalties if they fail to increase the average car's gasoline mieage by 50 per cent in five years and by 100 per cent by 1985.

Action on that bill came a few hours after the Senate, on a 62-29 vote, passed and sent to the House legislation extending through March 1, 1976, the government's authority to control the price of oil.

Control authority, which keeps the price of about 60 per cent of American-produced oil frozen at $5.25 a barrel, is scheduled to expire Aug. 31.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said if the measure expires Americans would face a $19-billion-a-year increase in energy costs.

And House Speaker Carl Albert said the House will act as soon as possible on extending the authority.

Asked if he thought President Ford would veto the extension, Albert said: "If he does, the wrath of the nation will fall on his head. I don't think he would dare . . . I know Jerry Ford. He's smarter than that."

Ford has proposed that the controls be phased out over 30 months and may send that plan to Congress on Wednesday.

collusion in bidding and no common or joint officers among the firms and thier subsidiaries.

"Simply put," Hogrefe said in an interview Tuesday, "there was no collusion or restraint of trade in violation of federal law. There's no problem."

Hogrefe said he could not release the full report made by the Federal Highway Administration since it contains confidential financial information about the two firms.

The report discounts claims by certain outstate contractors that the two Lincoln firms may have an unfair advantage over competitors through their subsidiaries' control of materials.

Critics also said the Abel-Dobson dominance was costing Lancaster County residents more for road work. However, those assertions could not be proven.

One sore point with outstate contractors about Lancaster County has apparently been remedied. That was a rule which existed until June 1974, which required that all gravel used in Lancaster road work had to be unloaded from railroad cars within Lancaster County. Abel owns some railroad sidings in Lincoln.

Those rules also required labor and trucks used in unloading gravel to be from Lancaster County.

Such rules were considered by outstate contractors to be advantageous to Abel and Dobson in bidding on Lancaster County road work.

Linkup Jockeying Starts

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Three American astronauts rocketed away from earth Tuesday and began maneuvering toward a space linkup with two Soviet cosmonauts in an adventure of cooperation between mankind's spacefaring nations.

A Saturn booster hurled an Apollo spacecraft into orbit in a blemish-free match to a Soviet launch earlier Tuesday from a spaceport half a world away.

Astronauts Thomas P. Stafford, Vance D. Brand and Donald K. Slayton were launched precisely on schedule — at 2:50 p.m. CDT — from the space complex at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

A few hours later, the astronauts fired the powerful service propulsion engine on the Apollo craft for less than a second in the first of a series of maneuvers that will carry them to a rendezvous on Thursday with the cosmonauts.

Brand described the brief firing as "sort of like being bumped by a truck."

Both the Soviet and American crews stayed up late on their first night in space tinkering with small problems on their space crafts.

The Soviet cosmonauts stayed up an extra hour and 20 minutes attempting to fix a broken television camera. They finally went to sleep about 7:40 p.m. CDT.

The American astronauts were haming problems with a urine collection system which failed to dump their waste overboard as planned.

They continued to work with the problem for almost an hour past the scheduled beginning of their eight-hour sleep period, which was to start at 11:15 p.m. Mission Control said the astronauts could sleep an extra 40 minutes Wednesday morning to make up for the loss of rest.

SeTech Might Not Take Pershing If Free

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

If Pershing College were offered free, they still might not take it, members of the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College (SeTech) Area Board agreed Tuesday.

And if it's for sale, they haven't got the money, said presiding vice chairman G. Alan Dunlap of Milford.

However, the board voted unanimously to appoint a committee to review various studies and recommendations regarding the use of the defunct campus in Beatrice. Findings will be reported at the August board meeting.

Don Nielsen of Lincoln, who offered the motion, said the intent is not to buy Pershing, but to determine if the campus and buildings will suit the special needs of technical community college programs.

The board discussed acquiring the campus, after it was offered for sale to SeTech Area President Robert S. Eicher by University of Nebraska Foundation President Harry Haynie. The foundation accepted Pershing as an unconditional gift last December. Haynie set no firm price, but tentatively mentioned $2 million, Eicher said.

"My first reaction" to Haynie's inquiry, Eicher said, "was 'That's strange. If we had pursued the thing with any wigor, we could probably have acquired it for free, the same as the university.' "

NU was reported as the intended recipient of Pershing, which may accept the campus free under its special arrangement with the foundation. The latter still holds title, but NU's interest has flagged.

Most of the board members opposed acquiring Pershing College. "If it's a gift, maybe we need to talk to somebody," Eicher said.

The college now rents space throughout Lincoln, and has campuses in Fairbury and Milford.

Besides, he added, "We haven't got" $2 million or any sum to spend on a fourth campus. Because Pershing is a "dorm-type campus," Ted Doyle of Fairbury said, "I see no way where we could make use of it (Pershing)."

Lloyd Wright of Reynolds said past legislative studies showed Pershing is unsuitable to adapt to technical training; rather, a "half-way hospital" and community for the elderly would be "very sound reasoning."

Loretta Draper of Plattsmouth said SeTech must consider whether Pershing's close proximity to Lincoln would adequately serve the entire college area. But Nielsen noted half the SeTech students come from Lancaster County. Mrs. Draper also suggested investigating what effect reopening Pershing would have on nearby Peru State College.

More immediately, the board juggled its own financial future, adoting an area property levy of 2.35 mills — 1.35 for 1975-76 operations and one mill for construction.

The combined assessed millage may be up to 2.5, under the 1975 technical community college reorganization bill, LB325. Each mill will generate about $1.3 million in the $5,675,781 SeTech budget, Eicher said. That includes $2,850,000 from the state general fund.

Undercutting Levy

By undercutting the maximum levy allowed, SeTech will incur a year-end deficit of approximately $280,000. But that amount will be covered by delayed tax collections which the college will receive in the next fiscal year.

The intent, Eicher said, is to avoid a large cash carry-over by undertaxing patrons. He and board members admitted a political move in reassessing the levy the Legislature revived after previous local taxation was declared unconstitutional.

Southeast will hold a public hearing on the proposed 2.35-mill levy on July 28 at 7:30 p.m., in the Lincoln campus Bryan Center, 1701 S. 40th.

Four of the other five technical community college areas have proposed higher local levies than Southeast's.

The board also deferred approval of modifying the bond indenture for the Fairbury campus dormitory. The vote was 6-2, with Wright and Earl Kraft of Lincoln voting no.

Investigators Find No Collusion In Abel-Dobson Job Domination

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Federal investigators have concluded there is no collusion between Abel and Dobson construction companies to dominate road work in Lancaster County.

The conclusion was reached following an inquiry prompted by a November 1974, report in The Star in which certain outstate contractors claimed road work in Lancaster County was "a closed shop" and open only to the Abel and Dobson firms, both located in Lincoln.

Bill Thornton, director of program review and investigations for the Federal Highway Administration, advised Nebraska district engineer Ray Hogrefe that his investigators found no evidence of collusion in bidding and no common or joint officers among the firms and thier subsidiaries.

"Simply put," Hogrefe said in an interview Tuesday, "there was no collusion or restraint of trade in violation of federal law. There's no problem."

Hogrefe said he could not release the full report made by the Federal Highway Administration since it contains confidential financial information about the two firms.

The report discounts claims by certain outstate contractors that the two Lincoln firms may have an unfair advantage over competitors through their subsidiaries' control of materials.

Critics also said the Abel-Dobson dominance was costing Lancaster County residents more for road work. However, those assertions could not be proven.

One sore point with outstate contractors about Lancaster County has apparently been remedied. That was a rule which existed until June 1974, which required that all gravel used in Lancaster road work had to be unloaded from railroad cars within Lancaster County. Abel owns some railroad sidings in Lincoln.

Those rules also required labor and trucks used in unloading gravel to be from Lancaster County.

Such rules were considered by outstate contractors to be advantageous to Abel and Dobson in bidding on Lancaster County road work.

Leonid, Ivan Watch Launch Live

MOSCOW (AP) - Communist leader Leonid I Brezhnev watched it in the Kremlin Crowds gathered in front of downtown Moscow television stores to take a look at the first live broadcast of a Soviet space launch.

Several hours later, Soviet television interrupted regular programming to present 20 minutes of live coverage of the launch from Cape Canaveral, Fla., of the Apollo spacecraft with which the Soviet craft Soyuz will link in an historic joint flight.

Viewers were shown the Houston control center and the rocket on the launch pad, as a Soviet commentator explained what was going on.

The quality of the television transmission was excellent Live film of the astronauts performing their first tasks in space and talking with the Houston controllers was also featured.

Before blastoff, viewers also got a look at the Moscow control center, where a group of U.S. space experts were present. The cameras focused on a large decal pasted on one of the American's control boards showing the cartoon character Snoopy, sitting on top of the Apollo, heading toward a tiny Russian bear aboard the Soyuz. Snoopy is saying "right on," and the bear responds with "poyekhali" (here we go)

There was little visible excitement earlier in the day in the Soviet capital as the Soyuz carrying two cosmonauts blasted off from the Baikonur Cosmodrome.

One man who was asked for his reaction as he stood in front of a television in the window of a Gorky Street store said: "Why, we've seen this many times before." Told that this was the first live telecast of a Soviet launch, he shrugged his shoulders.

Thousands of Soviets and foreign tourists strolled down Moscow streets that were almost completely devoid of any signs of the historic Soviet-American mission.

There were, however, a few window displays containing pictures of the astronauts and cosmonauts, and a special Apollo-Soyuz exhibit was mounted at the space pavilion at the Exhibition of Economic Achievements

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, reported a Soviet-American art exhibit devoted to space drew big crowds to the hall of the Soviet Artists Union.

But it was a regular working day and most people did not have access to TV sets at their jobs. Many, however, listened to the launch on the radio and the early evening television news program repeated the broadcast of the launch for all those who didn't see it earlier

The little reaction that could be garnered from Soviet citizens was generally favorable.

Viktor Simenetsky from the southern city of Krasnodar told a Soviet TV interviewer: "We were lucky to watch, with Muscovites, this historical occasion ... the joint flight became possible only because now economic, political and other ties have improved with the Americans."

Before the launch, a Moscow taxi driver said, "I think that the Soviet and American cosmonauts are the same and I wish them success. They are good, ordinary people."

But other Muscovites didn't share these feelings. Prior to the flight, a construction worker downing a beer at a bar, said heatedly: "What are we spending this money for? They should spend it on bread."

His companion, an electrical engineer, answered: "What's the matter with you? Have you no imagination? This is a fantastic achievement. It shows we can do whatever the Americans can do."

"Who cares?" the worker said. "I've got a family to raise."

Since only Soviet journalists were allowed to go to Baikonur and the telecast was being shown here and in the United States, journalists had to work hard to develop any new information.

Crowds Waited Until Just Before U.S. Blastoff

Cape Canaveral, Fla. (UPI) — The mob on the beach squealed in pleasure Tuesday as the Apollo spacecraft leaped into the wispy clouds over the Atlantic like a great white shark with its tail on fire.

"Yeah." "Right on." "Go. Go. Go."

From up on rooftop of a favorite rocket-watching spot in Cocoa Beach, there came a sour note

"Now, 3,000 people no longer have job," said a middle-aged man wearing cutoffs and a floppy fishing hat as he watched the last American rocket with men on board for at least four years soar out of sight.

A huge crowd which lingered at home until just a couple of hours before blastoff lined the 27 miles of Brevard County beaches to watch the three American astronauts ride a Saturn 1B booster, which was in mothballs eight years before it had its brief burst of glory.

"It looks like it's going to be a biggy," said Lt. Len Brady of the Florida Highway Patrol just before launch time. "There are considerably more people than were here for the last moon shot."

Dave Bartman, head lifeguard in Cocoa Beach, had an explanation for the crowd which he said was "heavier than the last moon shot."

"It's just a casual happening," Bartman said. "Everybody's trying to be a part of history."

Casual it was.

On the most popular strip of Cocoa Beach it looked like Daytona Speedway on the Fourth of July, with an armada of pickup truck campers and an army of nubile maidens wearing string bikinis.

At the Anchor Club, a hangout for the young crowd right on the beach, the plate glass windows were plastered with signs painted in Russian reading "Yankee, Go Home."

Roger Price, a car salesman from Melbourne to the south, said it was the closest he had ever been to a launch.

"If we had one a week, it'd still be exciting," said Price, sipping beer from a mason jar labled "rocket fuel."

On the other hand, Jess Bratton, a 21-year-old youth who plans to become a Russian interpreter for the Army this fall, was not impressed.

"I get a better charge out of seeing fireworks at Disney World," said Bratton, who spent his boyhood at nearby Merritt Island.

Brady said the crowd lining the 27 miles of Brevard County beaches "slipped up on" civil defense authorities.

"This is what we call a sleeper," he said. "I thought at 10 o'clock this morning it was going to be a loser "

Critics Challenged

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — As U.S. and Soviet space ships headed for a rendezvous, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger challenged critics of detente Tuesday, arguing that it offers hope "for our children of a more secure and a more just world."

"Can we ask our people to support confrontation unless they know that every reasonable alternative has been explored?" Kissinger asked critics.

"We consider detente a means to regulate a competitive relationship, not a substitute for our own efforts in building the strength of the free world," he said.

In a campaign-style trip designed to build confidence in U.S. foreign policy, Kissinger told the Upper Midwest Council that the Apollo-Soyuz flight is a good sign of the progress between the two countries.

Ford Says Launchings Good For Cooperation

He sent the crews of both the U.S. and Soviet spacecrafts a prelaunch message saying: "You will be blazing a new trail of international space cooperation." Ford added:

"Your flight represents another stage in man's efforts to further his understanding of his environment. It has already demonstrated something else — that the United States and the Soviet Union can cooperate in such an important endeavor ... I am confident your efforts and example will lead to further cooperation between our two countries."

In the morning he went to the State Department auditorium to join Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin and others to watch on a big screen the color telecast of the Soviet launch.

Together he and Dobrynin applauded as the Soyuz spacecraft reached its safe orbit.

Star-Studded Soviets, Americans Mingle At U.S. Rocket Launching

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Russian diplomats, scientists and bureaucrats mingled with American movie stars, millionaires and politicians Tuesday in the largest gathering of star-studded VIPs ever to watch a U.S. rocket launch.

VIPs numbering in the hundreds, along with 70,000 other invited NASA guests, watched as the Saturn's tail exploded in flame 3½ miles away and cheered when the missile cleared the gantry on its way to an orbital rendezvous with the Soviet Soyuz spacecraft.

But for many of the spectators, especially those with ties to the space program, the thrill of a successful launch was mixed with a sense of loss and nostalgia.

"It was exciting, like they all are," said Jim Lovell, a former astronaut. "But, sure, I felt a little sad, too.

Land Use Bill's Chances Ended

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Interior Committee voted Tuesday to defeat a controversial bill that would set up government machinery to plan the growth of undeveloped land throughout the United States.

By a vote of 23 to 19, the committee decided not to report the land use planning bill to the House floor, ending its chances in the current Congress.

Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., who sponsored the bill, said that as a result of its defeat, "planning decisions will continue to be made by developers in search of a buck and mindless of the environmental hazards."

Land use planning legislation has been the focus for several years of intense lobbying drives by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, some real estate organizations, and conservative political groups, all of whom have opposed it.

The Senate passed land use planning bills in the two previous sessions but when the legislation reached the House last year, the House voted 211 to 204 not to consider it.

The legislation that was defeated Tuesday was designed to encourage individual states and local communities to plot the use of their available land resources and would have provided them with grants totalling $500 million over the next six years.

Opponents of the measure said the stipulations that went with the grants imposed too much federal control over local development.

Rep. Sam Steiger, R-Ariz., who led the opposition, said the bill provided an opportunity for local government to "cop out" of planning.

"As I see it, even in this extremely revolutionary Congress, the members are aware the public does not believe the federal government is omniscient," he said after the vote.

Although the Ford administration opposed the land use planning bill because it violated the administration's moratorium on new spending, the voting was not along strict party lines, with 10 Democrats opposing the bill and 18 voting for it. The only Republican who voted to report the bill to the full House was Rep. Alan Steelman of Texas, one of its cosponsors.

When the committee first began debating the land use planning legislation May 14, Steiger lost a vote on a motion to table the bill, 22 to 20.

But three of the Democrats who voted against the motion, Reps. Roy Taylor of North Carolina, John Melcher of Montana, and Allan T. Horne of Utah, switched their votes Tuesday.

Taylor said that he had never encountered opposition to a bill as bitter as the opposition he found focused on the land use planning legislation in his district in the North Carolina mountains.

Howe, who represents Salt Lake City and ranchlands extending south to the Utah-Arizona border, said the bill "would add another level of federal planning which is unnecessary."

China Cutting Military

Washington — The CIA's top Chinese experts report that Peking has substantially cut back in the past three years its expenditures on military equipment. In papers submitted as part of a compendium on the Chinese economy published by the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, the CIA experts said that since 1972, the Chinese have cut spending from a 1971 high by 25%. This came as a surprise to agency, which in 1972 predicted continued upward trends.

The article gave no timetable for bringing the North and South together.

New Panel Asked On Work Equality

Washington (UPI) — Declaring progress in ending job discrimination has been inadequate, the Civil Rights Commission Tuesday recommended replacing the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission with a new superagency holding even broader powers to enforce fair employment laws.

"The federal effort to end this discrimination," the commission said in a 673-page report, "has not been equal to the task."

It charged that existing civil rights laws have been "weakened as a result of political compromises and do not provide an adequate framework within which federal agencies can work."

It proposed that a new agency, to be called the National Employment Rights Board, be set up in the next year with "at least 1½ times the funds currently provided for the total federal equal employment effort."

The new board should have stronger enforcement powers than any current agency.

While there has been "some progress" in ending employment discrimination in recent years, the report said, "Nevertheless, the rate of progress has been inadequate and major problems of systematic discrimination continue to affect adversely minorities and women."

The new agency would also take over tasks assigned several other agencies reviewed in the report, including the Civil Service Commission's enforcement of antidiscrimination executive orders, the Labor Department's equal employment operations in the Office of Federal Contract Compliance and the Equal Employment Coordinating Council.

HEW Nominee Says Busing Ineffective

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's nominee to head the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said Tuesday that busing has proven an ineffective tool for achieving school desegregation.

"It has not produced good results and has made many people feel their rights were being violated," HEW Secretary-designate F. David Mathews told the Senate Finance Committee.

Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., pointed to recent studies and surveys indicating that busing has been counterproductive end "has caused ill will among the races."

Mathews, 38, president of the University of Alabama, said he will seriously consider the new data. "I think any method has to be justified in the final analysis by its effectiveness," he said.

Busing also should be considered on the basis of whether it is right and just, said Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Ind-Va.

"That is true," replied Mathews. "I have grounds as a practical person to question that practice" of busing.

The Finance Committee is expected to act quickly on the nomination of Mathews, who has been named to succeed Caspar Weinberger as HEW secretary.

Mathews, generally described as a liberal, was given a warm reception by the most conservative committee. And he won a glowing endorsement from Alabama's Democratic senators, John Sparkman and James B. Allen.

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Charles Elzie Washington filled out an application to become a Houston police officer so truthfully, he ended up in jail charged with robbery.

Asked if he had ever been in trouble with the police before, Washington replied there was that liquor store he once robbed, but he didn't get caught.

A detective quickly checked Washington's fingerprints and arrested him in the police gym. The detective also found a loaded .32-caliber pistol in a bag Washington was carrying.

Man Convicted In Murdering Twin Fetuses

Camden, N.J. (UPI) — A Camden man, who shot and wounded a pregnant woman during a holdup here last March, was convicted Tuesday of murdering twin fetuses.

The verdict was returned Winfield Anderson, 24, charged with firing a shot which wounded Nikki Spearman of Camden who was pregnant at the time. She was taken to a hospital, where her twin babies were born prematurely.

One of them, who had been struck in the spine by a bullet, died shortly after birth while the other survived only 15 hours.

Anderson was found guilty of murder and eight other counts, including assault with intent to kill and possession of a weapon.

Runaway Baby Elephants Hide In Oklahoma 'Jungle'

Hugo, Okla. (UPI)—The underbrush is thick as jungle, full of cool water and lots of things to eat. Isa and Lillie, a couple of runaway baby elephants, probably love it.

Colma Banes, who looks after winter quarters of the Carson-Barnes Circus with her husband, Riley, said Tuesday searchers had located a spot where the missing animals may have bedded down. Two airplanes began skimming over the area, and Mrs. Banes said efforts were being made to get helicopters into hunt.

About 20 horsemen in a sheriff's posse, equipped with two-way radios, picked their way through the tangled vegetation.

"They are enjoying this little trip around," Mrs. Banes said. "They ought to love it out there. They've got plenty of freedom, plenty of food and cool water. There are lots of ponds and lakes out there."

"They're better off than we are," she said.

But Mrs. Banes said her concern for the elephants, who stand about 4½ feet high and weigh 1,000 to 1,500 pounds, increases the longer they are missing. The two, in a group of five being hauled from Michigan to Mexico, bolted during a rest stop at the winter quarters Saturday.

Laxalt To Head Group Backing Reagan In '76

WASHINGTON (AP) — Formation of a committee to convince former California Gov. Ronald Reagan to challenge President Ford for the 1976 Republican presidential nomination was announced Tuesday by six Republicans headed by U.S. Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada.

In a statement telephoned to the committee and released to newsmen in Los Angeles, Reagan said, "I must inform you that I have not reached a decision whether to become and active candidate for the presidency. I expect to make a decision before the end of the year."

Although Reagan has said in the past he did not encourage creation of the committee, he is believed to have given the project at least tacit approval. His statement said he "deeply appreciates" the support of the committee.

Aides have said the former governor's decision on running next year will be heavily influenced by what success the committee has in fund raising and on how much grass-roots support it turns up.

After Rejection, What?

The City Council Monday ordered that resolutions be drafted rejecting the 48th St. and Holdrege St. widening projects, but killing the plans now does not put an end to the controversy.

Because try as some council members might to completely separate action on the 48th and Holdrege widening proposals from the city's overall street policy, that action has a bearing on all future decisions on street improvements.

It will be hard, if not impossible, for the council to toss out the 48th and Holdrege widening plans and then take new proposals for street improvements to accommodate increased traffic volumes under consideration as if they were written on a clean slate. The city's street policy in the future cannot consist only of knee-jerk reactions to individual plans.

According to reports, the council had not developed a concensus on what their action this last Monday meant when they directed that kill resolutions on 48th and Holdrege be drafted and that city departments come up with alternative suggestions for the streets in question.

Some members felt that the "no widening" decision stands for all time; others disagreed. Some felt that the action taken on 48th and Holdrege is independent of overall street policy; others disagreed.

Credit Councilman Max Denney with stating a succinct Lincoln street policy, his preference: "no widening" of any streets. But that would be short-sighted and imprudent, because widening might be necessary and indeed welcome in some areas or on parts of some streets. There is a residential character to much of the sections of 48th and Holdrege that were proposed for widening. Not all Lincoln streets are residential, however. And the same reasons for opposing the widening of 48th or Holdrege might not hold true elsewhere.

We are in basic agreement with the ideas that neighborhood areas should be preserved; that motorist convenience does not necessarily have priority over property ownership and the beauty of the city. We're glad that the people's elected representatives in city government listen.

They have to do more, of course, than listen and bend with the prevailing opinion. They have to fit their individual decisions into the larger picture.

That means considering each individual, major decision in terms of its conformance with overall policy. A change in policy might result. It means that alternatives to rejected proposals will have to be considered: if not widening, then what? The proposals for one-way pairs, closer arterials, selective widening and what have you will have to be reveiwed if traffic is still considered to be a factor in street planning.

Adopting Denney's suggested blanket no widening policy really doesn't make it any simpler; it just eliminates one option (a major one, to be sure). By rejecting one approach, government is by necessity pushed into considering others.

Help For The Council

The City Council, which apparently looks with favor upon the idea of beefing up the mayor's staff with a new administrative coordinator, seemingly is still reluctant to give itself a helping hand.

Council members again debated the merits of hiring a council aide or assistant or a consultant on a per project basis during budget talks this week and came no closer to a conclusion than they have been able to during the past few years of discussion on the subject.

We think most observers of city government would dismiss the idea offered by Councilman Bob Jeambey that upgrading council staff implies distrust of a mayor's administration. It shouldn't imply that.

Hiring an aide should be seen, at least in Lincoln, as recognition of the fact that government has become more complex and time-consuming and that council members need a better method of obtaining and sorting out pertinent information.

Councilman Bob Sikyta put the problem into proper context: "We're kidding ourselves if we say we're making intelligent decisions when the number of committees are increasing and the number of reports departments are putting out are on the rise."

Maybe it's true, though, that the council knows best whether or not it needs help. And if the decision is not to hire help, then folks shouldn't take too seriously council complaints about the inability and lack of time to keep up with the workload.

Harris Comes Out Of The Basement

WASHINGTON — You might run for mayor of a small city or even for Congress out of a makeshift headquarters in the basement of your house. But everybody knows you can't run for president that way—everybody but Fred Harris.

Harris, an ex-senator from Oklahoma and ex-chairperson of what some people think may be the ex-Democratic Party, is not only running for president from the basement of his Virginia suburban house; he's also using the living room, dining room, study and two construction trailers parked in the back yard. In and out of this clutter of desks, phones, typewriters, duplicating machines and filing cabinets roam most of his 19 full-time staff members and sundry other part-time workers (of them all, including the full-time people, only two get small salaries, as compared to the $50,000 monthly payroll recently reported for the Scoop Jackson campaign).

When Fred Harris travels, it's in a style commensurate with his headquarters. On July 30, he's off with his wife and daughter for a 13-state, 44-stop, coast-to-coast tour that will bring him to San Francisco on Labor Day — in the camper in which the whole trip will be made. He plans the nearest thing possible today and within his means to Harry Truman's famous "whistle stop" tours.

Harris' means are not what you'd call opulent. According to his July 1 accounting, he has raised and spent about $73,000, most of it in small contributions averaging about $20. That's a drop in the bucket to what well-heeled candidates like Jackson and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen have stashed away. But, as explained by Jim Hightower, the young national coordinator of the Harris campaign, "It's not how much you've got but what you get for it."

What Harris has got for $73,000 is, first, a debt-free, self-sustaining operation. Second, he has put together volunteer organizations that he considers vigorous and effective in 18 states, including majors such as California, New York (where state coordinator Alex Goodwin says about 1,000 volunteers are at work organizing Harris committees in all 39 congressional districts), Wisconsin, Massachusetss and New Hampshire. He expects to have 10 more states properly organized by mid-September and is aiming at all 50 by the end of the year.

In fact, it is Harris' organizing, more than his do-it-yourself headquarters and his whistle-stop camper, that identifies his campaign strategy. In one recent day in California, he says about 850 people attended various Harris organizing meetings, and a high percentage signed green Harris pledge cards. The other night in Colorado he claims to have signed 175 committed supporters to pledge cards — while in a hotel room nearby another Democratic candidate was meeting with "about 12 fund-raising sources."

That has been the Harris strategy — to concentrate on organizing, while the other candidates have focused on raising the money — $5,000 in each of 20 states, in contributions of less than $250 — needed to qualify for federal matching funds under the complex new public financing law.

As a result, Harris proclaims himself far ahead of any other candidate in putting together state organizations. And he thinks his pledged supporters — he expects to have 50,000 signed up by the end of the year — give him the broad base he needs for raising his qualifying money. On the other hand, in his view, merely having raised the qualifying money early does not provide candidates like Jackson and Bentsen with effective political organizations in the various states.

The Harris campaign is moving, however, out of its self-sufficiency or "living off the land" phase, into a series of fund-raising events — such as a $50 per plate dinner in Denver the other night — being arranged by the various state organizations. A first test mailing to 130,000 potential Harris supporters went out last week, the forerunner of a mailing to a million "possibles" in September.

But the organizing goes on. Particularly in preparation for what Harris workers regard as the "first test," the meeting of the New Democratic Coalition in New York in December, when the District of Columbia presumably will endorse a candidate. Harris hopes to score well, and go on to a good showing in the Iowa precinct meetings in January, en route to "pre-empting the left" in the later primaries.

That may be a high aim, coming from a suburban basement and a $73,000 campaign, but Harris is remarkable in one other aspect, as well. He is the only Democratic candidate with a bold new economic program, one he thinks gives him a crack at the big pool of George Wallace voters. About that program, more later.

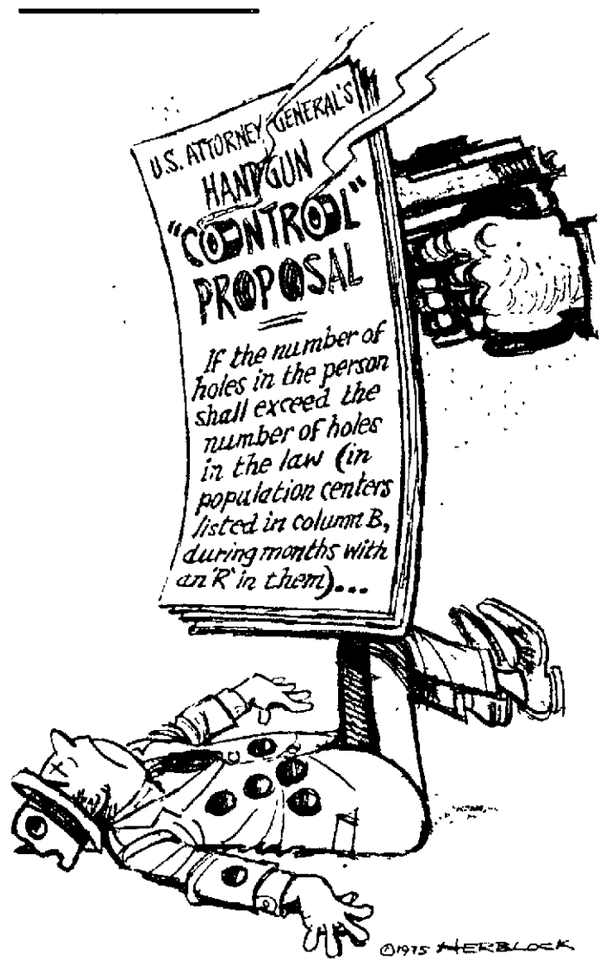
Hruska Wants 'Special' Defined



WASHINGTON — President Ford called Republican leaders behind closed White House doors the other day to discuss what to do about the soaring crime rate. The discussion quickly centered on gun control.

"The gun control issue," warned Rep. Robert Michel, R-Ill., "is the lightning rod which buzzes the voters."

Vice President Nelson Rockefeller suggested that the issue should be separated from the main crime-control legislation. "Can't gun control be in a separate bill?" he asked.

"Yes," agreed Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt. "Unless separated, we'll have trouble with both bills."

"Isn't gun control a bit untimely?" protested Rep. James Quillen, R-Tenn.

"Jim," said the President firmly, "the statistics of gun crimes are absolutely shocking. This zeroes in on the area of greatest threat."

"We don't ask for the registration of the gun or the gun owner," explained the President. But he wanted to curb the sale of cheap "Saturday night specials," which street criminals carry.

These handguns have become "a major factor," said the President, "in larger crime areas."

"I'm for banning Saturday night specials," agreed Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., "but only providing we get the right definition and limitations of the term, 'Saturday night special.' The size of the gun, yes. The price of the gun, no."

The real problem, he grumbled, was the failure of local law-enforcement. "There are a million illegally possessed guns in New York City," he said, "and the mayor has the nerve to blame the federal government. There is a failure of local enforcement of the law on licensed dealers."

The confidential White House minutes show that President Ford also favors compensating crime victims.

"I've seen the data from 12 states which have it," he said. "It has not run wild. It's under control."

"What about the greatest flaw of all — lenient judges?" broke in Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott, a former Pennsylvania prosecutor. "I used to convict them in the front room, then the defense counsel and the judge would spring them in the back room."

"We are proposing some strict standards for sentencing by judges," said Atty. Gen. Edward Levi.

The President agreed that judges were letting hardened criminals loose in the streets. "An abnormal percentage of crime," he said, "is committed by a relatively small number of criminals."

"I think the Board of Judges ought to do something about 'judge shopping'," Scott added, referring to the practice of some defense counsel to seek the most lenient judges for their cases. "It's a dreadful scandal."

"We've had a very large increase in crime," the President repeated. He called for a "tough program to protect the victim and to promote domestic tranquility."

The Coming Agreement

JERUSALEM — Now that the Israelis no longer feel they are being stampeded into making one-sided concessions by an impatient American secretary of state, an interim agreement with Egypt while not "at hand" is likely to be worked out by the end of the summer.

One gets that warily optimistic impression after talking with several government leaders and visiting with Premier Yitzhak Rabin following his report to the cabinet about his meetings in Bonn with Henry Kissinger.

A color photograph of the Fords and the Rabins, taken at the White House and warmly inscribed by President Ford, sits alone on the piano in the premier's residence.

The tough-minded, shy former general whose political base is steadily growing ticks off some of the caveats he would like to accompany the general feeling that a deal is in the making.

First, there can be no rush to an agreement. Fictitious deadlines have not helped the process of bargaining, while the absence of deadlines causes the Egyptians to be more forthcoming. Nor should the U.S. direct demands exclusively at the Israelis, since both sides have to "clarify" their positions.

Next, the process would be helped by fewer statements by American leaders that unless an interim agreement is reached, war will follow and an oil embargo begin. Such statements invite Arabs to use those threats and, thereby, encourage oil blackmail.

Finally, it should be clear that the Egyptians give up something in their positions of last March. Fortunately, the finger-pointing about which side was to blame for the suspension of the talks seems to be letting up.

Rabin will not go into the details of the negotiation, not even on a senior official's don't-say-I-told-you basis, but Israel is an open society and some informed guessing has been done. The duration of the interim agreement is central to the Israeli position — they want surcease of war for a long spell — and a four-year deal seems to be in the air, with the Egyptians publicly agreeing to a year at a time but likely to privately put an assurance of automatic renewal on the dotted line to the U.S.

The item that will get the most publicity in the next few weeks has to do with the drawing of lines on military maps and positioning American civilians as "technicians" — probably a euphemism for buffers and tripwires — but I had the impression, after a week in Israel that this is the sort of disagreement that can be steadily narrowed over time. It is the same with the discovery of a way to help the Egyptians phrase an intention not to make war without ever using the dread word "peace."

Defense Minister Shimon Peres thinks that the final area of dispute between the two countries is "cosmetic" compared to the disposition of military forces, but Rabin hangs in there for some diminution of hostile propaganda, and other evidences of peaceful intent such as the dropping of boycotts.

Both men agree on the need to keep the U.S. as an ally providing the arms that discourages Arabs from turning to war. Threats of a "reassessment" are not all that new to the relationship between the U.S. and Israel: In the Nixon years, Israelis had to make policy promises before getting their jets, though the leverage was applied far more discreetly.

The relationship between the two leading Israeli political figures offers an interesting sidelight to the negotiations. Rabin, in a shortsleeved blue snirt, is studiously low-key and middle-roadish; Peres, in a dark grey shirt with rolled-up sleeves, is trying to be even lower key and hawkish. Were it not for his following David Ben-Gurion into a splinter party some years ago, Peres would probably be premier today; he now has to help a rival succeed. (Nelson Rockefeller would understand.)

What will happen after the interim agreement is reached? Whatever became of the Russians and why have they been so supine about Mideast matters lately? Defense Minister Peres looks at Egypt and Southeast Asia and wryly observes that where one superpower tries the hardest, the other succeeds.

Some Israelis think that the Soviet Union had no choice but to lay low for the time being: Syria did not want to go to a Geneva settle-all; and it would have been unseemly for the Soviets to criticize Egypt for trying to get back territory through the U.S. on an interim basis.

After the agreement, there will be time enough for the Soviets to criticize Sadat as one who has sold out his Arab brothers for Egyptian gains, and then to push for a Geneva conference to reassert their Mideastern influence.

The Israelis are not in a euphoria about this coming agreement; they know that if a Soviet-armed Syria attacks them, Egypt would soon be drawn into the war despite any scraps of paper. But at least it would not be a concerted attack, as in the Yom Kippur War, and the U.S. would feel some extra responsibility for letting Israel win before interceding.

Rabin, who had little sleep after his return from West Germany, seemed more confident and less tense than he used to be as ambassador to the U.S. Is he enjoying his job?

The speech-making is not his strong suit, he replies, "but it's interesting work. Sometimes too interesting."

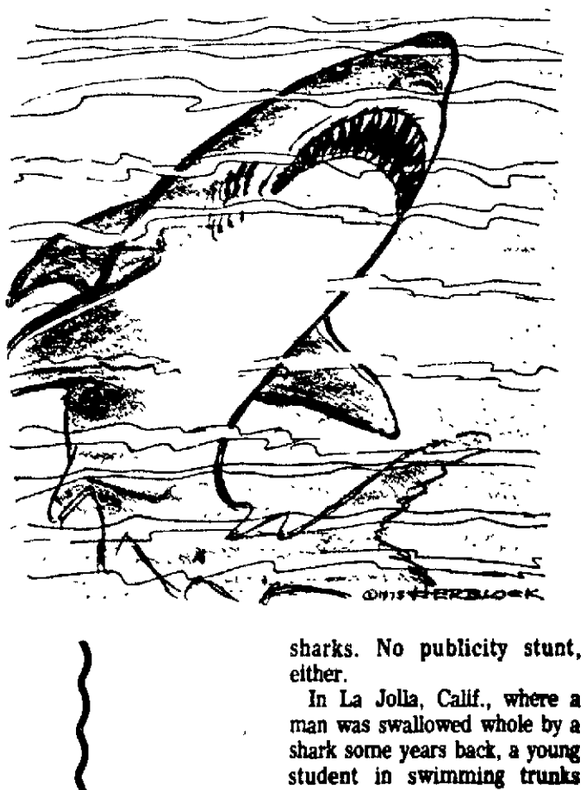
How To Get Along With A Shark



NEW YORK — Everyone who has seen "Jaws" is petrified. Looking for sharks in the bathtub. Fighting off sharks in their sleep.

In New York, they're even seeing sharks in the streets. Almost concurrent with the premier of "Jaws," a fire hydrant was opened up on a hot day and it spewed out baby sharks. No publicity stunt, either.

In La Jolla, Calif., where a man was swallowed whole by a shark some years back, a young student in swimming trunks burst into the Scripps Institution of Oceanography one morning, and breathlessly requested a book which would show him the difference between a shark and a porpoise.

"There's one or the other of them out near the pier where I am going to swim — if it's not a shark," he explained.

The girl behind the desk, having no information on the subject, telephoned a professor who obligingly relayed the information:

The distinction between a shark and a porpoise is quite clear, he said:

"If it bites, it's a shark. If not, it's a porpoise."

Peter Gimbel, the reformed Wall Street analyst who became a diver and made a movie about the great white shark ("Blue Water, White Death") four years ago, says he was amazed that "Jaws," which used Disney-animated great whites, was so realistically thrilling. One of the world's top experts on this most awesome of the 250 species of sharks, Peter claims that people really shouldn't be worried that they'll meet one of those beasties during a swim: they're not likely to turn up.

"The great whites have worldwide distribution, but they represent only perhaps one-tenth of one percent of the shark population. My (film) crew and I spent six months in South Africa and Ceylon waters, swimming among hundreds of sharks of all kinds, without seeing that first Great White," he said.

When they finally located the beast near Australia, however, they found "the biggest, best-armed, deadliest monster in the sea. The Great White Shark is the perfect eating machine — the only species that comes at you with its mouth wide open. Other sharks test their prey by bumping with their snoots. But the Great White tests by biting. He simply consumes whatever is available — under the workable theory that if it tastes good, it is good."

Of course, there are other sharks that like to eat, too. But of the 250 known species of these predators, only 12 are known officially as "man-eaters." And even the "man-eaters" can't be counted upon to bite you every time — any more than you can count on a porpoise to push your raft to shore every time you're shipwrecked.

"The fear of sharks is 99% psychological," said Dr. Wheeling North, one of Scripps' shark authorities when I interviewed him several years ago. "Any predator carnivore prefers his usual food to the taste of the unusual, and in the shark's case, his usual food is fish. If there are other fish around, he usually won't be interested in eating you. Unless, of course, he's sick or enraged."

How will you know if he's sick or enraged?

"If he eats you."

Also, Dr. North added, "It is a natural thing in the animal kingdom to admire bravery. A shark respects a courageous human. If he sees a swimmer beat an orderly retreat without panic, he will not attack."

He compared the shark's attitude to that of other noble beasts: "I imagine even a well-fed lion, looking at a firmly poised human, might say 'Oh, what the hell' — and back away."

Another shark authority, icthyologist Dr. Eugenie Clark, admits that the Great White Shark, "from all the evidence we have, is the most dangerous of the species. He runs to about 20 feet, and hangs out in deep water. Watch for him where there are deep canyons directly off shore, as in some parts of Southern California."

The bull shark, however, is interesting to Dr. Clark, "because it goes into fresh water streams where it becomes stunted and more vicious. But don't worry too much about that" . . . unless you happen to be swimming in fresh water.

Actually, most shark experts are reassuring. "To be honest, the real dangers of the water are the things you cannot see," maintains Eugenie. "A stingray, buried in the sand. A jellyfish; there are some tremendous jellyfish — nine feet in diameter. When you realize that the relatively small Portuguese men-of-war have tentacles that can reach out 60 feet, you realize how dangerous really big jellyfish can be. Hit by hundreds of thousands of their little poison needles, a person suffers shock and drowns.

"By contrast, the shark is a pussycat. A shark, seeing a human form, will almost never attack. They say sharks are unpredictable. But I've found them every bit as predictable as any other wild animal. Oh, occasionally, they'll have an off-day . . ."

Rabin will not go into the details of the negotiation, not even on a senior official's don't-say-I-told-you basis, but Israel is an open society and some informed guessing has been done. The duration of the interim agreement is central to the Israeli position — they want surcease of war for a long spell — and a four-year deal seems to be in the air, with the Egyptians publicly agreeing to a year at a time but likely to privately put an assurance of automatic renewal on the dotted line to the U.S.

The item that will get the most publicity in the next few weeks has to do with the drawing of lines on military maps and positioning American civilians as "technicians" — probably a euphemism for buffers and tripwires — but I had the impression, after a week in Israel that this is the sort of disagreement that can be steadily narrowed over time. It is the same with the discovery of a way to help the Egyptians phrase an intention not to make war without ever using the dread word "peace."

Defense Minister Shimon Peres thinks that the final area of dispute between the two countries is "cosmetic" compared to the disposition of military forces, but Rabin hangs in there for some diminution of hostile propaganda, and other evidences of peaceful intent such as the dropping of boycotts.

Both men agree on the need to keep the U.S. as an ally providing the arms that discourages Arabs from turning to war. Threats of a "reassessment" are not all that new to the relationship between the U.S. and Israel: In the Nixon years, Israelis had to make policy promises before getting their jets, though the leverage was applied far more discreetly.

The relationship between the two leading Israeli political figures offers an interesting sidelight to the negotiations. Rabin, in a shortsleeved blue shirt, is studiously low-key and middle-roadish; Peres, in a dark grey shirt with rolled-up sleeves, is trying to be even lower key and hawkish. Were it not for his following David Ben-Gurion into a splinter party some years ago, Peres would probably be premier today; he now has to help a rival succeed. (Nelson Rockefeller would understand.)

What will happen after the interim agreement is reached? Whatever became of the Russians and why have they been so supine about Mideast matters lately? Defense Minister Peres looks at Egypt and Southeast Asia and wryly observes that where one superpower tries the hardest, the other succeeds.

Some Israelis think that the Soviet Union had no choice but to lay low for the time being: Syria did not want to go to a Geneva settle-all; and it would have been unseemly for the Soviets to criticize Egypt for trying to get back territory through the U.S. on an interim basis.

After the agreement, there will be time enough for the Soviets to criticize Sadat as one who has sold out his Arab brothers for Egyptian gains, and then to push for a Geneva conference to reassert their Mideastern influence.

The Israelis are not in a euphoria about this coming agreement; they know that if a Soviet-armed Syria attacks them, Egypt would soon be drawn into the war despite any scraps of paper. But at least it would not be a concerted attack, as in the Yom Kippur War, and the U.S. would feel some extra responsibility for letting Israel win before interceding.

Rabin, who had little sleep after his return from West Germany, seemed more confident and less tense than he used to be as ambassador to the U.S. Is he enjoying his job?

The speech-making is not his strong suit, he replies, "but it's interesting work. Sometimes too interesting."

PHYLLIS BATTELLE

How To Get Along With A Shark

NEW YORK — Everyone who has seen "Jaws" is petrified. Looking for sharks in the bathtub. Fighting off sharks in their sleep.

In New York, they're even seeing sharks in the streets. Almost concurrent with the premier of "Jaws," a fire hydrant was opened up on a hot day and it spewed out baby sharks. No publicity stunt, either.

In La Jolla, Calif., where a man was swallowed whole by a shark some years back, a young student in swimming trunks burst into the Scripps Institution of Oceanography one morning, and breathlessly requested a book which would show him the difference between a shark and a porpoise.

"There's one or the other of them out near the pier where I am going to swim — if it's not a shark," he explained.

The girl behind the desk, having no information on the subject, telephoned a professor who obligingly relayed the information:

The distinction between a shark and a porpoise is quite clear, he said:

Peter Gimbel, the reformed Wall Street analyst who became a diver and made a movie about the great white shark ("Blue Water, White Death") four years ago, says he was amazed that "Jaws," which used Disney-animated great whites, was so realistically thrilling. One of the world's top experts on this most awesome of the 250 species of sharks, Peter claims that people really shouldn't be worried that they'll meet one of those beasties during a swim: they're not likely to turn up.

"The great whites have worldwide distribution, but they represent only perhaps one-tenth of one percent of the shark population. My (film) crew and I spent six months in South Africa and Ceylon waters, swimming among hundreds of sharks of all kinds, without seeing that first Great White," he said.

When they finally located the beast near Australia, however, they found "the biggest, best-armed, deadliest monster in the sea. The Great White Shark is the perfect eating machine — the only species that comes at you with its mouth wide open. Other sharks test their prey by bumping with their snoots. But the Great White tests by biting. He simply consumes whatever is available — under the workable theory that if it tastes good, it is good."

Of course, there are other sharks that like to eat, too. But of the 250 known species of these predators, only 12 are known officially as "man-eaters." And even the "man-eaters" can't be counted upon to bite you every time — any more than you can count on a porpoise to push your raft to shore every time you're shipwrecked.

"The fear of sharks is 99% psychological," said Dr. Wheeling North, one of Scripps' shark authorities when I interviewed him several years ago. "Any predator carnivore prefers his usual food to the taste of the unusual, and in the shark's case, his usual food is fish. If there are other fish around, he usually won't be interested in eating you. Unless, of course, he's sick or enraged."

How will you know if he's sick or enraged?

"If he eats you."

Also, Dr. North added, "It is a natural thing in the animal kingdom to admire bravery. A shark respects a courageous human. If he sees a swimmer beat an orderly retreat without panic, he will not attack."

He compared the shark's attitude to that of other noble beasts: "I imagine even a well-fed lion, looking at a firmly poised human, might say 'Oh, what the hell' — and back away."

Another shark authority, icthyologist Dr. Eugenie Clark, admits that the Great White Shark, "from all the evidence we have, is the most dangerous of the species. He runs to about 20 feet, and hangs out in deep water. Watch for him where there are deep canyons directly off shore, as in some parts of Southern California."

The bull shark, however, is interesting to Dr. Clark, "because it goes into fresh water streams where it becomes stunted and more vicious. But don't worry too much about that" . . . unless you happen to be swimming in fresh water.

Actually, most shark experts are reassuring. "To be honest, the real dangers of the water are the things you cannot see," maintains Eugenie. "A stingray, buried in the sand. A jellyfish; there are some tremendous jellyfish — nine feet in diameter. When you realize that the relatively small Portuguese men-of-war have tentacles that can reach out 60 feet, you realize how dangerous really big jellyfish can be. Hit by hundreds of thousands of their little poison needles, a person suffers shock and drowns.

"By contrast, the shark is a pussycat. A shark, seeing a human form, will almost never attack. They say sharks are unpredictable. But I've found them every bit as predictable as any other wild animal. Oh, occasionally, they'll have an off-day . . ."

Students Take Garbage As A Matter Of Course

(EDITOR'S NOTE: What the consumer throws away provides valuable clues to what's happening in a community. At the University of Arizona, the study of garbage is an earnest undertaking (with some lighter moments) as Ana Honig reports for McGraw-Hill World News.)

By ANA HONIG

They've been digging into the trash cans of Tucson for a new kind of archaeology course, studying the community via its garbage.

Prof. William L. Rathje, who started the whole thing and calls himself "a garbage missionary," thinks garbage is a whole new area for special scientists — an overlooked source of information on modern America.

"There's talk around the country now about garbage as a source of scarce materials," he said, "but it may turn out to be just as valuable as a source of data."

Stuffed Olive Won

Prof. Rathje and his students approach the idea with great seriousness, but also with some humor. Student garbageologists wear white laboratory coats and the professor has a sign over his desk that says "Garbage Dump." And there was even a Halloween party when everyone came dressed as his favorite garbage (a stuffed olive won the costume prize).

Writer Arch Hapier, who lives in Tucson, joined a research expedition to the maintenance yard of the city's sanitation department where the students open garbage sacks and weigh discards.

"I had expected to see a lot of empty cans and, well — garbage," he reported in HUMAN BEHAVIOR, a social sciences publication. "What I wasn't prepared for was all the edible food; chunks of steak, unopened cans, a pile of potatoes, untouched TV dinners and enough cold cuts for a family picnic."

Food Wasted

Indeed, the garbageologists say, the average Tucson household tosses out between $80 and $100 of eatable food a year. Figured by weight, it is wasting nine per cent of its food — and, probably, another six per cent is going down the garbage disposal back home.

Armed with rubber gloves and face masks, the students compared garbage from Tucson's country club area with that of a low-income Mexican-American neighborhood.

Curiously, their study of discarded packages showed meat consumption was about the same in both areas. And the low-income neighborhood had garbage showing above-average use of vitamin supplements, cleaning products and fresh vegetables.

Middle-Income Surprises

Garbage from middle-income areas had some surprises, too: At a time of booming meat prices, it contained big amounts of discarded edible beef. And at a time of high vegetable prices, it contained concertingly large amounts of wasted vegetables.

How come? Nutritionist Gail G. Harrison, working with the Rathje crew, guessed consumers tend to overbuy during periods of food scarcity. Or they try to use unfamiliar meat cuts and other foods with unhappy results.

But there is more in a trash can besides food (one authority says only 14% of municipal refuse is food and the rest is paper, metals, leaves and grass, wood and plastic).

"It's like a treasure hunt," Prof. Rathje explained. "You find a beautiful steak and wonder why it was thrown away. Or birth control pills. Or silver-studded motor cycle boots."

Or intriguing combinations of things from a single household; like the trash bag that yielded contraceptives, an empty diaper bag and a baby bootie.

Beer Can Increase

Or clues about new city-wide trends; like a sudden increase in the number of empty beer cans everywhere, indicating, the researchers say, that more folks are doing their beer drinking at home.

"We always thought of garbage as a nuisance," Prof. Rathje said. "Unsightly, unhealthy. Our reaction was simply to get rid of it. America is spending $3.7 billion a year to dispose of it. That's almost three times as much as we spend on medical research."

But the trash can image is changing, at least at the University of Arizona. "We used to use the computer term — garbage in and garbage out, but not any more," Prof. Rathje said. "We treat it with more respect."

Kivett Fights Plan To Split Bertrand's Booty

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The director of the Nebraska State Historical Society is fighting plans to split up the booty — ranging from cannonballs to pickles — recovered from the century-old steamboat Bertrand.

Marvin Kivett, Historical Society director, said Tuesday the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., has proposed that it and two other federal agencies take possession of thousands of articles found aboard the steamboat where it sank in 1865 on the Missouri River north of Omaha.

The artifacts, except for duplicates, should remain as a unit in Nebraska and Iowa, Kivett said, adding, "We don't want to see them go to Washington to be used in some period house."

To prevent it from happening, Kivett and his counterpart in Iowa have enlisted their respective congressional delegations in the fight.

The Bertrand, a stern paddlewheeler based in St. Louis, was carrying goods and passengers to gold fields in Montana on April 1, 1865, when it struck a snag and sank in the Missouri, roughly 25 miles north of Omaha.

The 40 crewmembers and passengers aboard the 161-foot boat survived; however, the boat and its 250 tons of cargo were buried under 35 feet of sand and mud.

In the meantime, the river changed its course westward and the DeSoto National Wildlife Refuge was established on the site of the wreck.

In 1967, two Omaha men located the wreck and by 1969 had recovered some two million artifacts, including nine flasks of mercury valued at $5,000.

The Fish and Wildlife Service, which runs the refuge, established a temporary museum ot display the artifacts. The museum is in Iowa, although the Bertrand itself lies in Nebraska east of the Missouri.

Kivett speculated that possibly the Fish and Wildlife Service might have asked the Smithsonian to propose dividing the collection to ease its burden.

The collection, he said, needs more curators than the Fish and Wildlife officials have been willing to give and some climate controls to preserve the artifacts.

Merrill Mattes, a special consultant for the State Historical Society, suggested, "The Fish and Wildlife Service ought to relinquish the collection to someone who can take care of it."

He termed the Bertrand "a major find" with an unmatched "treasure trove of artifacts."

As yet, Kivett said the issue has not been settled. "We're still on high center," he said.

However, Kivett believes he has an ace if the plan is pushed ahead. The President's Historical Advisory Council must approve any plans to divide and move the artifacts, and Kivett believes the council will never approve such a move.

The entire collection remains intact, he said, and none has been released to other museums, which he said is just as well until the fiture of the artifacts is settled.

Some Combines Carrying Loads Of Weed Seeds

Noxious weeds and common weeds, including jointed goatgrass, were found in several combines, explained John Furrer, Extension agronomist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

"Undesirable weeds in what fields often get started at harvest time. Jointed goatgrass recently introduced into western and southern Nebraska is suspected of getting there by custom combine operators who brought it in from Texas, Oklahoma, and Kansas," said Furrer.

Wheat growers who employ custom combines should insist that they be thoroughly cleaned, Furrer stated. He noted that inspection and cleaning before the combine enters the field could prevent serious weed infestation.

Nebraska Jobless Rate Up In June

Unemployment in Nebraska increased more than a full percentage point from May to June of this year, but Labor Department officials say the increase in normal for the season.

The state unemployment rate rose from 4.7% in May to 5.8% in June, while the Lincoln rate climbed from 4.9 to 5.4 and the Omaha rate from 6.5 to 8.2.

A year ago, the state unemployment rate was 3.8%, Lincoln's 3.3% and Omaha's rate was 5.5%.

Statewide, figures show 18,600 people entered the job market for the first time in June, compared to 10,200 in May.

Council Considers Money For Pool

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

City Councilman Dick Baker wants to trim the Park Department budget so he can put in the Seacrest Park swimming pool. Councilman Bob Sikyta just wants to trim the budget.

Several other lawmakers indicated Tuesday night that cuts could be made in the $2.8 million budget. As a result, they delayed action on the Park Department proposals for a week.

Mayor Helen Boosalis doesn't think any more cuts can be made.

Nevertheless, Baker is hoping he'll be able to carve out $350,000 worth of items to make room for that swimming pool in the city budget. Mayor Boosalis had cut it out.

Bond Election

Instead, she is recommending that a bond election be held next spring to pay for the pool and several other projects. That way, she says, construction of the pool wouldn't increase the tax rate for the 1975-76 fiscal year, but would have an impact on taxes in upcoming years.

Baker doesn't want to risk having the pool sunk by the voters in an election, particularly since he believes the city made a "verbal commitment" to residents in southeast Lincoln last year to put the pool in this year.

Last year the city was faced with a decision — two areas of town needed new pools and there was only money to build one. As a result, $260,000 was appropriated last summer for a pool in Meadowlane with the understanding the Seacrest Park pool would be added this year.

Mrs. Boosalis said, "I'm very well aware that at least some kind of commitment was made."

But, the mayor says she felt she had no choice but to axe the pool from the budget because a $350,000 addition would push the city's mill levy rate up near the ceiling.

$90,000 More In '76

The city budget is being hit hard by inflation. The same pool, for instance, will cost $90,000 more to build next year than this year.

While Baker hopes to be able to include the pool in the budget, Sikyta thinks the city can't afford to add items, let alone keep some of the projects budgeted by the mayor.

In particular, he thinks the city payroll for all departments is too high. He suggested that no vacancies be filled, that equipment be scratched and that some projects be cut or eliminated.

He also wants to reduce the $130,000 residential and downtown tree planting budget.

Mayor Boosalis strenuously lobbied to keep the trees in the budget, since, she said, "Trees have much greater benefits than just looking pretty and green."

In another item, the mayor reported she is studying th possibility of combining the park rangers with the Police Department.

Mayor Not Sure

For several years, Mrs. Boosalis and council members have asked the administration to look at the matter. Since taking office May 19, Mrs. Boosalis said she has held meetings on the subject, but is now not so convinced that the rangers should be put under the Police Department.

Although she hasn't made a final decision, the mayor said she is inclined to leave the park rangers as a separate unit.

Also included in the Park Department budget are funds to build tennis courts at Bethany, Ballard, Southwood and Piedmont parks. Another $30,000 has been added to start plans and landscaping for park land between Wilderness Park and Lagoon Park as part of the Crescent Greens area.

The council approved the Recreation Department's $660,545 budget, the $265,319 municipal pools' budget and $386,324 golf courses' budget.

Parks and Recreation Director Don Smith said additional money will be needed to put in fences, a mobile home for a club house and a parking lot at the Mahoney Golf Course in northeast Lincoln.

$70,000 Promised

Last year, supporters of the project said they could raise $70,000 to help pay for the course.

Sikyta and Councilman Max Denney said now is the time to call in the pledges so the course can open next summer.

A major chunk of the pool budget will go to pay the salaries of lifeguards and other staff needed to operate the Meadowlane pool, also scheduled to open next summer.

Hearing Set On Firing Of Liquor Control Officer

A hearing has been set for Monday on the dismissal of the Liquor Control Commission's chief enforcement officer, Norman Rollins.

The three-man commission voted unanimously Friday to fire Rollins. He had been with the commission a year and a half.

Rollins said he will not accept dismissal without disputing the allegations, and that he plans to fight all charges at the hearing.

He was charged with offering an enforcement job to a cement contractor, improper use of state cars for personal use, failure to report an accident and several other charges.

FTC Proposes Three Warranty Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission proposed three rules Tuesday designed to assure that customers know about and manufacturers make good on written warranties backing their products.

The rules do not require companies to provide warranties, but regulate those that choose to do so.

One of the most controversial provisions in the thick package of rules would require some two million retailers to post signs inviting customers to leaf through volumes of warranties covering items sold in each department.

Commissioner Mayo J. Thompson dissented from that provision, saying it could cost customers as much as $1 million a year more on their purchases.

The rules would implement the Magnuson-Moss Warranty Act. They would apply to any product costing more than $5 if the manufacturer or seller chose to back it up with a written warranty.

Warranties would have to give the maker's name and address, full details on coverage and exclusion, duration of the warranty and information on what the purchaser can expect if the product fails or is defective.

Another proposed rule would require sellers to make the written warranty terms available before purchase.

The unavailability of consumer product warranties at the point of sale prevents the use of the warranty as an informational tool in the consumer's purchasing decision and as a tool for making production comparisons, the FTC said.

The FTC proposal also would require catalog, mail order and door-to-door sellers to disclose warranty terms before a sale.

A third proposed rule would establish what the commission called "informal dispute settlement mechanisms" for the firm making the warranty and the customer who purchased the product. The FTC said this would "facilitate fair and expeditious settlement of warranty disputes without placing unnecessary burdens on warrentors."

Public comments will be received for the next 60 days. The FTC said it will schedule public hearings later in Washington, D.C.; Chicago; and Los Angeles.

Police Arrest 4 Following Scuffle

Police arrested four people Tuesday night in connection with a disturbance at H. P. Casady's, 56th and Cornhusker, following an attempt by two officers to talk with a man about possible possession of narcotics.

When the officers tried to take the man outside, he allegedly knocked one of them down, police said. They said about 20 persons then engaged in a shoving match with the officers until six others, responding to a call for assistance, broke up the disturbance.

Police arrested an 18-year-old and a 17-year-old for disturbing the peace and resisting arrest and a 17-year-old and a 19-year-old for interfering with an officer. A 13-year-old was referred to juvenile authorities, police said.

Council Considers Money For Pool

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

City Councilman Dick Baker wants to trim the Park Department budget so he can put in the Seacrest Park swimming pool. Councilman Bob Sikyta just wants to trim the budget.

Several other lawmakers indicated Tuesday night that cuts could be made in the $2.8 million budget. As a result, they delayed action on the Park Department proposals for a week.

Mayor Helen Boosalis doesn't think any more cuts can be made.

Nevertheless, Baker is hoping he'll be able to carve out $350,000 worth of items to make room for that swimming pool in the city budget. Mayor Boosalis had cut it out.

Bond Election

Instead, she is recommending that a bond election be held next spring to pay for the pool and several other projects. That way, she says, construction of the pool wouldn't increase the tax rate for the 1975-76 fiscal year, but would have an impact on taxes in upcoming years.

Baker doesn't want to risk having the pool sunk by the voters in an election, particularly since he believes the city made a "verbal commitment" to residents in southeast Lincoln last year to put the pool in this year.

Last year the city was faced with a decision — two areas of town needed new pools and there was only money to build one. As a result, $260,000 was appropriated last summer for a pool in Meadowlane with the understanding the Seacrest Park pool would be added this year.

Mrs. Boosalis said, "I'm very well aware that at least some kind of commitment was made."

But, the mayor says she felt she had no choice but to axe the pool from the budget because a $350,000 addition would push the city's mill levy rate up near the ceiling.

$90,000 More In '76

The city budget is being hit hard by inflation. The same pool, for instance, will cost $90,000 more to build next year than this year.

While Baker hopes to be able to include the pool in the budget, Sikyta thinks the city can't afford to add items, let alone keep some of the projects budgeted by the mayor.

In particular, he thinks the city payroll for all departments is too high. He suggested that no vacancies be filled, that equipment be scratched and that some projects be cut or eliminated.

He also wants to reduce the $130,000 residential and downtown tree planting budget.

Mayor Boosalis strenuously lobbied to keep the trees in the budget, since, she said, "Trees have much greater benefits than just looking pretty and green."

In another item, the mayor reported she is studying th possibility of combining the park rangers with the Police Department.

Mayor Not Sure

For several years, Mrs. Boosalis and council members have asked the administration to look at the matter. Since taking office May 19, Mrs. Boosalis said she has held meetings on the subject, but is now not so convinced that the rangers should be put under the Police Department.

Although she hasn't made a final decision, the mayor said she is inclined to leave the park rangers as a separate unit.

Also included in the Park Department budget are funds to build tennis courts at Bethany, Ballard, Southwood and Piedmont parks. Another $30,000 has been added to start plans and landscaping for park land between Wilderness Park and Lagoon Park as part of the Crescent Greens area.

The council approved the Recreation Department's $660,545 budget, the $265,319 municipal pools' budget and $386,324 golf courses' budget.

Parks and Recreation Director Don Smith said additional money will be needed to put in fences, a mobile home for a club house and a parking lot at the Mahoney Golf Course in northeast Lincoln.

$70,000 Promised

Last year, supporters of the project said they could raise $70,000 to help pay for the course.

Sikyta and Councilman Max Denney said now is the time to call in the pledges so the course can open next summer.

A major chunk of the pool budget will go to pay the salaries of lifeguards and other staff needed to operate the Meadowlane pool, also scheduled to open next summer.

POSTCARD

by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — While we were in Canada, Stuart Little died. He was a house mouse — our youngest chick got him on one of those complicated trades that go on among smaller teenagers.

Anyway, Stuart went to his reward — no point in the sad details. R.I.P. Stuart. "As it must to mice and men—."

I said: "Stop weeping. Here's a Kleenex. Look, I'll buy you another mouse."

I said: "Let me have a day to think about it. I've got terrible jet lag."

I have. True. Four hours of time difference. By 7 at night, I was yawning. At 5 in the morning, I was up raiding the kitchen. Ravenous.

☆ ☆ ☆

One thing about getting out of town, a whole bunch of mail doesn't get answered. And when you come back it's too late anyway.

We answer all comers. The Good Guys, the Bad Guys. The praisers, the complainers, the whiners.

("The Cap'n's fair and square as Jack the Bear," said the children. "He'll be at his elevenses by seven. On account of the jet lag.")

Rip van Winkle returns. ("What's new, old neighbor?") The movie doing best is "Jaws." ("Mother, did you see where I put my false teeth?")

After toil and tears and union meetings, I once boosted my paycheck to $100! That was enormous money — they don't spoil the help on the dailies.

A hundred bucks. I walked with kings. The banker nodded to me when I walked up to the wicket. I made a down payment on a new car. I got deeper and deeper in debt.

Those were the days!

After peaking to that glorious $100, I was cursed with ambition to make more. Like $125, an incredible fortune.

The giant dinosaur extinguished himself by standing tiptoe to reach the higher and juicier leaves. From his skeleton remains, Science finds ambition slipped his mighty discs.

He is extinct. A bundle of reconstructed bones in a dim room of the museum. The terror of the primeval swamp is dead aas a door nail.

I was ambitious and I developed a back so limp I had to put it in a brace. Let the higher (and juicier) leaves be my friends. Eat cabbage. It's safer.

☆ ☆ ☆

The black cat named Hell is doing fine, we're happy to report. Likewise a visiting black cat name of Ashes.

Two birds — they have swept-back wings — built a nest under the small boat dock. By peeking through a crack we could count the eggs. Eventually there were small birds.

What we could never figure out was how they could learn to fly. They were smack over water.

("The life jacket is under your seat," said the stewardess. "Do not inflate the jacket while inside the aircraft.")

Well, the small birds one day were gone. Did they push the throttles to war emergency power just before they hit the water?

We never knew. But — the same birds have laid a new clutch of eggs in the same overwater nest. If at first you don't succeed, try a new location.

San Francisco — While we were in Canada, Stuart Little died. He was a house mouse — our youngest chick got him on one of those complicated trades that go on among smaller teenagers.

Anyway, Stuart went to his reward — no point in the sad details. R.I.P. Stuart. "As it must to mice and men—."

I said: "Stop weeping. Here's a Kleenex. Look, I'll buy you another mouse."

I said: "Let me have a day to think about it. I've got terrible jet lag."

I have. True. Four hours of time difference. By 7 at night, I was yawning. At 5 in the morning, I was up raiding the kitchen. Ravenous.

☆ ☆ ☆

One thing about getting out of town, a whole bunch of mail doesn't get answered. And when you come back it's too late anyway.

We answer all comers. The Good Guys, the Bad Guys. The praisers, the complainers, the whiners.

("The Cap'n's fair and square as Jack the Bear," said the children. "He'll be at his elevenses by seven. On account of the jet lag.")

Rip van Winkle returns. ("What's new, old neighbor?") The movie doing best is "Jaws." ("Mother, did you see where I put my false teeth?")

After toil and tears and union meetings, I once boosted my paycheck to $100! That was enormous money — they don't spoil the help on the dailies.

A hundred bucks. I walked with kings. The banker nodded to me when I walked up to the wicket. I made a down payment on a new car. I got deeper and deeper in debt.

Those were the days!

After peaking to that glorious $100, I was cursed with ambition to make more. Like $125, an incredible fortune.

The giant dinosaur extinguished himself by standing tiptoe to reach the higher and juicier leaves. From his skeleton remains, Science finds ambition slipped his mighty discs.

He is extinct. A bundle of reconstructed bones in a dim room of the museum. The terror of the primeval swamp is dead aas a door nail.

I was ambitious and I developed a back so limp I had to put it in a brace. Let the higher (and juicier) leaves be my friends. Eat cabbage. It's safer.

The black cat named Hell is doing fine, we're happy to report. Likewise a visiting black cat name of Ashes.

Two birds — they have swept-back wings — built a nest under the small boat dock. By peeking through a crack we could count the eggs. Eventually there were small birds.

What we could never figure out was how they could learn to fly. They were smack over water.

("The life jacket is under your seat," said the stewardess. "Do not inflate the jacket while inside the aircraft.")

Well, the small birds one day were gone. Did they push the throttles to war emergency power just before they hit the water?

We never knew. But — the same birds have laid a new clutch of eggs in the same overwater nest. If at first you don't succeed, try a new location.

Cole Marsh, late Spring

and on it—beauty,
and in it—beauty,
and above it—beauty,
and around it—beauty.

But a living gruel and a gruel for the living it is; even as the benevolent spot dies . . . it's future a meadow in some imaginable geologic age . . . this salt marsh of Nebraska . . . this marsh of plains miracles.

The shallow Salt Valley has so few marshes left and they are so endangered these places which brought animals, attracted early and then decadant man to dredge preservative for meat and spice for vegetables.

But the few remnants contain enough nutrients to encourage more magic than can be explained in uncounted days in a thousand texts.

I have foot-raked through nets of watery vegetation with a quiet, cameraed, bearded, portrayer of marshes and we have crashed the rushes and there were pop-up excitements appearing always . . . hopeful and crises full.

A few feet away, a different predator has struck and there are bloody feathers.

In nature there is no life without some dying and even the casing of a 12-gauge seems as natural as the strike of a hawk.

Yards from the leavings of hunters is the nest of a blackbird. Comedic, tiny, orange-skinned and skimpily white-haired chicks rhythmically raise their heads and open their mouths to the mother who has flown away.

Humorously, in the bank mud, there is the print of a pheasant which, like a clumsy human, slipped and fell with little dignity.

Overhead, low in the low sky, small birds pester-pester-pester a Buteo hawk, too dark and too far away to identify except for the size and slow wings of a soarer.

Around the marsh is the print of a massive buck which escaped human eyes by moments.

A natty male bobolink ritually roller coasters upward, downward at the marsh's edge.

Beyond, a man-tall thistle turns it's purple, shag-rug, thorny head toward a gentle sky. Mallow beneath glows even more gently. Goats-beard, being content yet as a yellowstar flower, stands higher, the middle step of a color ladder from mallow to thistle.

In the cat-tails, a clutch of ducklings hide and Yellow-Headed Blackbirds do not, making threatening sounds and threatening charges.

Everywhere there is life from the dying of a place. From the rot . . . an insect . . . a plant. From the witless, small things . . . food for living and birthing. From the birthing . . . geneses of a thousand kinds.

Each year the magic arena shrinks as the sun burns away the water, as the saline spring depletes, as man drains it, pollutes it, changes it, buries it, hides it.

But before the last miniature of itself is gone in a final unnoticed moment, the marsh will keep dying each autumn to feed each spring's bright hunger.

And teal will make their seasonal love flights and the nymphs their seasonal love swims and the dragonflies will swarm to the sedge.

Soviet-Backed Faction Near Control Of City

LUANDA, Angola (AP) — The Soviet-backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola was close to holding military control in the Angolan capital of Luanda with only a few pockets held by a rival liberation organization.

However, an army of 3,000 guerrillas of the Front for the Liberation of Angola — FNLA — which has some Chinese support, was reported Tuesday to be poised for a possible attack on parts of the capital.

Meanwhile in Lisbon, Portugal's military government was considering sending armed reinforcements to halt the civil war between the two rival movements. Along with a third liberation organization, they are to take over the territory when it is granted independence in November.

Fighting between the two movements flared up last Wednesday and since then an estimated 300 persons have been reported killed and some 1,000 injured, mostly civilians.

The FNLA suffered serious losses in battles with the Soviet-backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA) in the capital's suburbs.

However, Daniel Chipenda, deputy secretary-general of the FNLA reportedly told supporters he was opposed to Portuguese military interference in Angola and said his movement is "capable of taking on its own responsibilities."

Chipenda leads FNLA troops stationed in Angola's coffee capital of Carmona about 220 miles northeast of Luanda. A former MPLA military commander, he defected with 3,000 troops about four months ago.

There has been no official confirmation of reports that Chipenda's men, armed with Chinese weapons received through neighboring Zaire, are actually moving toward the capital.

The possibility of an FNLA siege of Luanda has set off a wave of panic buying in shops where shelves were stripped of bread and canned food.

Luanda passed its quietest day in a week Tuesday, however, and only minor and sporadic sounds of shooting erupted from the black suburbs.

In Lisbon, a spokesman for the ruling Revolutionary Council said it was considering sending troop reinforcements, and military sources in the Portuguese capital reported some units had already been earmarked for airlifting to Angola, if necessary.

Air Force Maj. Jose Costa Martins said any reinforcements sent to beef up the 24,000 Portuguese troops on duty there would be used only to maintain the Lisbon government's neutrality ahead of turning the colony over to African leaders.

The Portuguese troops would be expected to protect 400,000 white Portuguese settlers caught in the cross-fire between the black liberation forces.

As part of an evacuation program, the Portuguese air line TAP asked Swissair for extra planes to fly out Angolan refugees.

The ordering of more troops into the colony where the old right-wing dictatorship carried out a costly, 13-year war against independence-seeking guerrillas, would be a bitter step for the military leaders. They overthrew the old regime principally because they disagreed with the colonial war.

Discord Threatens To Delay Conference

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Discord over three key issues Tuesday threatened to delay an East-West supersummit that only the day before had been targeted for a July 30 start in Helsinki, Finland.

"Personally, I would no longer bet on July 30," a south European diplomat said as the Europen Security Conference's coordinating committee stalled in its efforts to clean up a variety of key texts.

Diplomats privately predicted a final decision wouldn't be reached until later this week on the summit which would bring together President Ford, Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and leaders of 33 other countries to give final approval to a 100-page document on East-West detente.

The three issues which prevented accord on a starting date for the summit were military security as proposed by the Turks, economic cooperation between East and West and the definition of areas that conference objectives would cover.

The document provides for advance notification of maneuvers in a zone extending 155 miles from the European national boundaries of participating nations. But Turkey, bordered by three Asian countries, is insisting on a thinner notification line and though there were some moves reported toward a compromise, there was no breakthrough.

On the economic issue, there were difficulties in finding a formula to even out the fundamental differences between the free enterprise system of the West and the state-run economy of the Soviet bloc.

The third key unresolved text was called the "final act." It would be phrased to extend conference objectives "throughout Europe." The West Germans want it to include a veiled reference to West Berlin, which the East bloc considers a separate entity not represented at Geneva.

The Russians would agree to the phrase "throughout Europe" if there were at the same time a reference to the irreversibility of detente. Some Western and neutral nations have argued that the word detente lacks precise definition and could create a loophole.

The Soviet Union initiated the supersummit as a confirmation of its post-World War II influence over Eastern Europe. Western nations resisted for two years until winning Soviet concessions on issues such as prior notification of troop maneuvers, freer travel for journalists and scholars and East-West marriages.

Most Cabindans Want Exclave's Independence From Angola

©The New York Times

By THOMAS A. JOHNSON

Luanda, Angola — At least one point on which Angola's three competing guerrilla movements agree is that the exclave Cabinda "is an integral part" of Angolan territory.

But many of the 80,000 Cabindans disagree. And in the forests of neighboring Zaire, 60 miles from the Cabinda border, some 800 to 2,000 Cabindan guerrillas are training to fight for the independence of the exclave from Angola, according to reports from diplomats and Portuguese intelligence sources.

The guerrillas are said to have a nucleus of about 300 trained African soldiers who served with the Portuguese forces. While their number is small, the Cabindans are capable of adding more chaos to Angola's general instability and increasing the danger of outside interference in the region.

Cabinda is a 2,800-square-mile territory on the Atlantic coast sandwiched between the Congo Republic and Zaire. Wealthy in oil, it now produces 150,000 barrels of petroleum a day. It also produces timber, coffee, cocoa and cattle, and has known deposits of gold and phosphates.

The main question posed by the conflicting interest of three Angolan nationalist movements and the Cabinda guerrillas is whether the territory will continue to strengthen the Angolan economy or break away as a small, rich and independent state.

The Cabinda guerrillas are organized in the Front for the Liberation of Cabinda, which was founded in the early 1960s but remained moribound until the Portuguese coup in April 1974 that overthrew the right-wing Lisbon government and signaled the end of Portugal's rule in her African territories.

During a recent interview in Kinshasa, Zaire, Luis Franck, president of the Cabinda Liberation Front, said the territory was "physically separated, ethnically and historically different from Angola and should be an independent state."

He noted that while Portuguese contact with Angola began in the late 15th century, it was not until about 400 years later that Cabinda's African rulers invited the Portuguese into their territory.

Franck said Portugal began administering Angola and Cabinda as one unit for the sake of convenience after World War II.

Cabindans in the exclave and elsewhere are becoming more vocal in their support for the independence movement.

When the liberation movement attempted to set up headquarters in Cabinda late last year, it was driven out by Portuguese troops and by elements of the Marxist guerrilla movement in Angola, the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola.

And, in more recent fighting, guerrillas, of the popular movement, said to number 2,000 in Cabinda, drove elements of the rival National Front for the Liberation of Angola out of Cabinda City. Some 700 soldiers of the national front, an African nationalist organization, now share a base with about 150 troops of the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, a moderate Socialist group, about 10 miles south of Cabinda City.

The Cabindan guerrilla organization has been supported by President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire with funds and weapons. This had led some Angolans to speculate that Mobutu might be inclined to move his own troops into Cabinda when the Portuguese leave later this year, especially if the Angolan guerrilla movements continue their squabbles.

Mobutu has denied any intention of taking over Cabinda. However, he is known to favor an independent Cabinda so as not to have Zaire's only outlet to the sea, a 30-mile-wide strip extending between Cabinda and the main Angolan territory, squeezed between two parts of Angola.

Soviet-Backed Faction Near Control Of City

LUANDA, Angola (AP) — The Soviet-backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola was close to holding military control in the Angolan capital of Luanda with only a few pockets held by a rival liberation organization.

However, an army of 3,000 guerrillas of the Front for the Liberation of Angola — FNLA — which has some Chinese support, was reported Tuesday to be poised for a possible attack on parts of the capital

Meanwhile in Lisbon, Portugal's military government was considering sending armed reinforcements to halt the civil war between the two rival movements. Along with a third liberation organization, they are to take over the territory when it is granted independence in November.

Fighting between the two movements flared up last Wednesday and since then an estimated 300 persons have been reported killed and some 1,000 injured, mostly civilians.

The FNLA suffered serious losses in battles with the Soviet-backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA) in the capital's suburbs.

However, Daniel Chipenda, deputy secretary-general of the FNLA reportedly told supporters he was opposed to Portuguese military interference in Angola and said his movement is "capable of taking on its own responsibilities."

Chipenda leads FNLA troops stationed in Angola's coffee capital of Carmona about 220 miles northeast of Luanda. A former MPLA military commander, he defected with 3,000 troops about four months ago.

There has been no official confirmation of reports that Chipenda's men, armed with Chinese weapons received through neighboring Zaire, are actually moving toward the capital.

The possibility of an FNLA siege of Luanda has set off a wave of panic buying in shops where shelves were stripped of bread and canned food

Luanda passed its quietest day in a week Tuesday, however, and only minor and sporadic sounds of shooting erupted from the black suburbs.

In Lisbon, a spokesman for the ruling Revolutionary Council said it was considering sending troop reinforcements, and military sources in the Portuguese capital reported some units had already been earmarked for airlifting to Angola, if necessary.

Air Force Maj. Jose Costa Martins said any reinforcements sent to beef up the 24,000 Portuguese troops on duty there would be used only to maintain the Lisbon government's neutrality ahead of turning the colony over to African leaders.

The Portuguese troops would be expected to protect 400,000 white Portuguese settlers caught in the cross-fire between the black liberation forces.

As part of an evacuation program, the Portuguese air line TAP asked Swissair for extra planes to fly out Angolan refugees.

The ordering of more troops into the colony where the old right-wing dictatorship carried out a costly, 13-year war against independence-seeking guerrillas, would be a bitter step for the military leaders. They overthrew the old regime principally because they disagreed with the colonial war.

Most Cabindans Want Exclave's Independence From Angola

©The New York Times

By THOMAS A. JOHNSON

Luanda, Angola — At least one point on which Angola's three competing guerrilla movements agree is that the exclave Cabinda "is an integral part" of Angolan territory.

But many of the 80,000 Cabindans disagree. And in the forests of neighboring Zaire, 60 miles from the Cabinda border, some 800 to 2,000 Cabindan guerrillas are training to fight for the independence of the exclave from Angola, according to reports from diplomats and Portuguese intelligence sources.

The guerrillas are said to have a nucleus of about 300 trained African soldiers who served with the Portuguese forces. While their number is small, the Cabindans are capable of adding more chaos to Angola's general instability and increasing the danger of outside interference in the region.

Cabinda is a 2,800-square-mile territory on the Atlantic coast sandwiched between the Congo Republic and Zaire Wealthy in oil, it now produces 150,000 barrels of petroleum a day. It also produces timber, coffee, cocoa and cattle, and has known deposits of gold and phosphates.

The main question posed by the conflicting interest of three Angolan nationalist movements and the Cabinda guerrillas is whether the territory will continue to strengthen the Angolan economy or break away as a small, rich and independent state

The Cabinda guerrillas are organized in the Front for the Liberation of Cabinda, which was founded in the early 1960s but remained moribound until the Portuguese coup in April 1974 that overthrew the right-wing Lisbon government and signaled the end of Portugal's rule in her African territories.

During a recent interview in Kinshasa, Zaire, Luis Franck, president of the Cabinda Liberation Front, said the territory was "physically separated, ethnically and historically different from Angola and should be an independent state."

He noted that while Portuguese contact with Angola began in the late 15th century, it was not until about 400 years later that Cabinda's African rulers invited the Portuguese into their territory.

Franck said Portugal began administering Angola and Cabinda as one unit for the sake of convenience after World War II.

Cabindans in the exclave and elsewhere are becoming more vocal in their support for the independence movement.

When the liberation movement attempted to set up headquarters in Cabinda late last year, it was driven out by Portuguese troops and by elements of the Marxist guerrilla movement in Angola, the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola.

And, in more recent fighting, guerrillas, of the popular movement, said to number 2,000 in Cabinda, drove elements of the rival National Front for the Liberation of Angola out of Cabinda City. Some 700 soldiers of the national front, an African nationalist organization, now share a base with about 150 troops of the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, a moderate Socialist group, about 10 miles south of Cabinda City.

The Cabindan guerrilla organization has been supported by President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire with funds and weapons. This had led some Angolans to speculate that Mobutu might be inclined to move his own troops into Cabinda when the Portuguese leave later this year, especially if the Angolan guerrilla movements continue their squabbles.

Mobutu has denied any intention of taking over Cabinda. However, he is known to favor an independent Cabinda so as not to have Zaire's only outlet to the sea, a 30-mile-wide strip extending between Cabinda and the main Angolan territory, squeezed between two parts of Angola.

Discord Threatens To Delay Conference

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Discord over three key issues Tuesday threatened to delay an East-West supersummit that only the day before had been targeted for a July 30 start in Helsinki, Finland.

"Personally, I would no longer bet on July 30," a south European diplomat said as the Europen Security Conference's coordinating committee stalled in its efforts to clean up a variety of key texts.

Diplomats privately predicted a final decision wouldn't be reached until later this week on the summit which would bring together President Ford, Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and leaders of 33 other countries to give final approval to a 100-page document on East-West detente.

The three issues which prevented accord on a starting date for the summit were military security as proposed by the Turks, economic cooperation between East and West and the definition of areas that conference objectives would cover.

The document provides for advance notification of maneuvers in a zone extending 155 miles from the European national boundaries of participating nations. But Turkey, bordered by three Asian countries, is insisting on a thinner notification line and though there were some moves reported toward a compromise, there was no breakthrough.

On the economic issue, there were difficulties in finding a formula to even out the fundamental differences between the free enterprise system of the West and the state-run economy of the Soviet bloc.

The third key unresolved text was called the "final act." It would be phrased to extend conference objectives "throughout Europe." The West Germans want it to include a veiled reference to West Berlin, which the East bloc considers a separate entity not represented at Geneva.

The Russians would agree to the phrase "throughout Europe" if there were at the same time a reference to the irreversibility of detente. Some Western and neutral nations have argued that the word detente lacks precise definition and could create a loophole.

The Soviet Union initiated the supersummit as a confirmation of its post-World War II influence over Eastern Europe. Western nations resisted for two years until winning Soviet concessions on issues such as prior notification of troop maneuvers, freer travel for journalists and scholars and East-West marriages.

Gov. Wallace Lengthens Lead In Fund Raising Field

©The New York Times

Washington — Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama raised another $1.3 million for his undeclared presidential campaign in the last four months, lengthening his fund raising lead among a wide field of 1976 candidates.

As before, most of the Wallace funds came from a massive mail appeal whose costs absorbed a large portion of the new income.

Roughly half of the Wallace campaign's direct-mail receipts — a somewhat smaller fraction than before — went to pay for postage and for the printing, mailing and computer services of the Richard A. Viguerie Co. in Falls Church, Va.

Reports from the Wallace Campaign, Inc., to the Federal Election Commission indicated that Wallace has now raised more than $4 million in the past two years — still more than all the declared presidential candidates put together, including President Ford.

But the reports of campaign expenses also confirmed that Wallace has an unusually costly fund raising operation. In the period between March and June 1975, covered in the latest filing, the Wallace campaign reported expenditures of $859,000 — most of it for mail services and $548,000 to the Viguerie company and its subsidiaries. Of its gross income of more than $4 million, the Wallace campaign has spent all but $727,000.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., continues to report the largest net bank balance among numerous Democratic presidential funds — nearly $1.2 million at the end of June. The Jackson for President Committee reported contributions of $747,000 in the last four-month period.

Sen. Lloyd A. Bentsen of Texas raised $350,000 in the same period and reports cash on hand at $387,000.

Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona reported March-to-June income of $219,000, and a closing balance of $82,000. Former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia received $125,000 in the last reporting period and had a net of $25,000.

Former Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina has raised $75,000 in the last four months, and saved $16,000 of it. Former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma raised an aggregate $59,000 and reported $5,324 in cash on hand at the end of June.

Democrats Leaning Toward N.Y. Convention

©The New York Times

Washington — The Democratic National Committee is prepared to hold the party's 1976 presidential convention in New York City if mechanical problems involving facilities at Madison Square Garden can be worked out within the next month.

For a number of political and logistic reasons, the Democratic site selectors clearly prefer New York over its only major rival, Los Angeles, and are openly hopeful that the party will be able to hold its first nominating convention there since 1924.

Democratic National Chairman Robert S. Strauss told reporters Tuesday the committee was "more than leaning" toward the selection of New York City. "There's a definite tilt," he declared.

While no final decision will be reached until the end of August, other party sources indicated that the only deterrent to a New York convention was the question of whether the hall could support the volume and kind of activity involved in a national nominating session.

A major factor in enthusiasm here for a New York City convention is the cooperation and support for the project voiced by Gov. Hugh L. Carey, Mayor Abraham Beame and state chairman Patrick L. Cunningham, who also happens to be chairman of the national site-selection committee.

Little Bird Has Persistence

A little cardinal in Fremont, Ohio, makes up in determination and foot power what he lacks in flight training. From the left, the little bird's version of king of the mountain involves a herculean hop from the ground to the fence, a flutter to rest on a cross bar, a furious wing-flapping, and — finally — the old hang-on-for-dear-life technique at the top.

Oglala Leadership Sought

Rapid City, S.D. (UPI) — American Indian Movement leader Russell Means, leader of the 71-day occupation of the reservation village of Wounded Knee in 1973, announced Tuesday he will again seek the chairmanship of the Oglala Sioux Tribe.

In the 1973 tribal election, incumbent Tribal Chairman Richard Wilson defeated Means by slightly more than 200 votes amid claims by AIM that the election was illegal. Means said Tuesday, "It has been proven illegal in the courts."

Wilson has already announced he will seek an unprecedented third term as head of the tribe on the Pine Ridge Reservation. In winning re-election in 1973, Wilson became the first person to serve two consecutive terms as Oglala tribal chairman.

Air Force Calls Him 'Lieutenant'

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — An Air Force sergeant has gone to court to stop being called lieutenant.

Lieutenant C. Weddington says it was just too confusing because he's really a staff sergeant, although he was christened "Lieutenant" 33 years ago.

He went to Sacramento Superior Court on Monday to petition for a change of his name.

Brush Fire Still Raging

Ranchita, Calif. (AP) — A roaring brush fire shot across 4,000 acres, burning a half-dozen empty structures and briefly threatening this rural retirement community northeast of San Diego Tuesday before dying winds came to the aid of fire fighters.

Fire officials said the day-old, wind-whipped blaze was still out of control, and they could not estimate when it was expected to be contained.

At one point, fire-fighting officials considered evacuating 200 persons as flames licked to within a mile to Ranchita. Fifteen residents left on their own and spent Monday night at the homes of friends.

A house under construction was burned Monday along with a mobile home and four old mining shacks. An abandoned trailer also was destroyed.

Gov. Wallace Lengthens Lead In Fund Raising Field

Washington — Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama raised another $1.3 million for his undeclared presidential campaign in the last four months, lengthening his fund raising lead among a wide field of 1976 candidates.

Of its gross income of more than $4 million, the Wallace campaign has spent all but $727,000.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., continues to report the largest net bank balance among numerous Democratic presidential funds — nearly $1.2 million at the end of June. The Jackson for President Committee reported contributions of $747,000 in the last four-month period.

Sen. Lloyd A. Bentsen of Texas raised $350,000 in the same period and reports cash on hand at $387,000.

Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona reported March-to-June income of $219,000, and a closing balance of $82,000. Former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia received $125,000 in the last reporting period and had a net of $25,000.

Former Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina has raised $75,000 in the last four months, and saved $16,000 of it. Former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma raised an aggregate $59,000 and reported $5,324 in cash on hand at the end of June.

Democrats Leaning Toward N.Y. Convention

©The New York Times

Washington — The Democratic National Committee is prepared to hold the party's 1976 presidential convention in New York City if mechanical problems involving facilities at Madison Square Garden can be worked out within the next month.

For a number of political and logistic reasons, the Democratic site selectors clearly prefer New York over its only major rival, Los Angeles, and are openly hopeful that the party will be able to hold its first nominating convention there since 1924.

Democratic National Chairman Robert S. Strauss told reporters Tuesday the committee was "more than leaning" toward the selection of New York City. "There's a definite tilt," he declared.

While no final decision will be reached until the end of August, other party sources indicated that the only deterrent to a New York convention was the question of whether the hall could support the volume and kind of activity involved in a national nominating session.

A major factor in enthusiasm here for a New York City convention is the cooperation and support for the project voiced by Gov. Hugh L. Carey, Mayor Abraham Beame and state chairman Patrick L. Cunningham, who also happens to be chairman of the national site-selection committee.

Little Bird Has Persistence

A little cardinal in Fremont, Ohio, makes up in determination and foot power what he lacks in flight training. From the left, the little bird's version of king of the mountain involves a herculean hop from the ground to the fence, a flutter to rest on a cross bar, a furious wing-flapping, and — finally — the old hang-on-for-dear-life technique at the top.

Oglala Leadership Sought

Rapid City, S.D. (UPI) — American Indian Movement leader Russell Means, leader of the 71-day occupation of the reservation village of Wounded Knee in 1973, announced Tuesday he will again seek the chairmanship of the Oglala Sioux Tribe.

In the 1973 tribal election, incumbent Tribal Chairman Richard Wilson defeated Means by slightly more than 200 votes amid claims by AIM that the election was illegal. Means said Tuesday, "It has been proven illegal in the courts."

Wilson has already announced he will seek an unprecedented third term as head of the tribe on the Pine Ridge Reservation. In winning re-election in 1973, Wilson became the first person to serve two consecutive terms as Oglala tribal chairman.

Air Force Calls Him 'Lieutenant'

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — An Air Force sergeant has gone to court to stop being called lieutenant.

Lieutenant C. Weddington says it was just too confusing because he's really a staff sergeant, although he was christened "Lieutenant" 33 years ago.

He went to Sacramento Superior Court on Monday to petition for a change of his name.

Brush Fire Still Raging

Ranchita, Calif. (AP) — A roaring brush fire shot across 4,000 acres, burning a half-dozen empty structures and briefly threatening this rural retirement community northeast of San Diego Tuesday before dying winds came to the aid of fire fighters.

Fire officials said the day-old, wind-whipped blaze was still out of control, and they could not estimate when it was expected to be contained.

At one point, fire-fighting officials considered evacuating 200 persons as flames licked to within a mile to Ranchita. Fifteen residents left on their own and spent Monday night at the homes of friends.

A house under construction was burned Monday along with a mobile home and four old mining shacks. An abandoned trailer also was destroyed.

District 74 Future Disputed In G.I.

Grand Island (UPI) — Two Grand Island area groups are opposing each other over the future of Public School District 74 and whether the district should be eliminated and merged with the Grand Island school system.

A crowd of more than 100 persons filed the Hall County District Courtroom here Monday night for a public hearing on the dissolving of District 74, which is adjacent to the Grand Island system.

One group wants to retain the district and has filed suit in district court seeking to prevent the county school superintendent from dissolving the district.

Duane Nelson, a lawyer representing the group, said the revised state law under which District 74 may be dissolved does not apply and should not be used to eliminate the school district.

District 74 does not contain any public schools within its boundaries. School age children in the district have been attending Grand Island schools for the past two years on a contract basis.

Linda Galusha, a resident of the district who favors a merger with Grand Island, said persons opposing dissolution were not interested in quality education for their children.

She said the issue is monetary, contending opponents "don't want to have to pay" for educating their children through school taxes and would rather continue contracting.

Betty Saunders, county school superintendent, presided over the hearing and said there was no action she could take until after a July 25 court hearing that would decide whether she can dissolve the district at her discretion.

G.I. Budget Jumps 21%

Grand Island (UPI) — The city council gave unanimous approval Monday night to a budget of $26.9 million for fiscal 1975-76.

The total is $4.5 million higher than last year's, but the 21% jump resulted from inclusion of federal community development funds and revenue from the sale of power, which were not included in previous budgets.

City Manager John Carpenter said the spending proposal shows expansion of service in only one area: construction of an 18-hole municipal golf course. The city will put up $154,000, plus $80,000 earmarked previously, to pay its half for construction of the $471,000 course. Federal funds will pay for the other half.

The budget also includes $20,000 for a civic center study and an across-the-board 8% salary boost for city employes.

Carpenter said the budget was held down by a decision to replace certain city equipment by using federal revenue-sharing money, if possible, rather than city funds.

NW Bell Plans Hike Thursday

Omaha (AP) — Northwestern Bell Telephone officials say they plan to put their new, higher telephone rates into effect Thursday.

The date must be approved by the Nebraska Public Service Commission (PSC), a Bell spokesman said Tuesday.

The PSC has already approved the rate hikes, giving the company permission to increase rates by about $5.3 million annually. Bell originally asked for an increase of about $16 million.

The new rates will affect regular customers on Northwestern Bell's 95 exchanges in the state, as well as long distances callers within the state.

They Told Us To Let Him Go

Lexington (UPI) — An Oklahoma man, wanted in San Bernadino, Calif., on an armed robbery charge, was being sought Tuesday in Nebraska and Oklahoma, despite spending last weekend in the Dawson County Jail here.

Ellis D. Campbell, 32, Centrahoma, Okla., Saturday asked the Lexington Police Department for Salvation Army traveler's assistance, which is administered by the police.

Campbell's wife made the initial request, but was told by police she would need her husband's identification. Campbell, who had been waiting in a parked car along with his two children, provided the identification, which was checked through the National Crime Information Computer, indicating he was wanted for armed robbery in California.

The sheriff's office said Campbell waived extradition to California, but California authorities ordered Campbell released because they could not find the complaining witness for the armed robbery charge.

Campbell was released Monday, and 30 minutes later, the sheriff's office said, California authorities said they found the witness and requested that Campbell be held.

By that time, the sheriff's office said, Campbell had picked up his wife and two children at a Lexington motel and was gone. Oklahoma authorities were asked to be on the lookout for Campbell.

School Building Costs Estimated At North Platte

North Platte (AP) — Overall costs of a proposed school construction project here are estimated at between $9.7 million and $10 million, architects told the North Platte Board of Education Monday night.

The board expects to decide Aug. 11 whether it should call for a bond election to finance the project.

The proposed project includes a new junior high school, a new elemetary school and major additions to six other elementary schools.

Waterproofing Firm Sued By State Consumer Unit

The state went to court Tuesday seeking restitution on behalf of homeowners in the Lincoln and Omaha areas who have been victimized by a basement waterproofing firm whose work has been the subject of several complaints by Nebraskans.

The suit, filed by Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas against Hydro-Tech Systems, Inc., is the first major court action taken by Douglas' consumer protection division since it was formed last January.

Jerold Fennell, chief of the consumer protection division, said he had received 16 "direct" complaints from customers of the firm who claimed their basements continued to leak.

Fennell estimated that possibly as many a: 100 Nebraskans may have been victimized by the firm.

Homeowners contacted thrus far indicated they paid the firm from $300 to $1,500 each depending on the extent of the work to have their basements waterproofed.

Hydro-Tech uses a substance called bentonite to waterproof basements. Fennell said bentonite is a volcanic clay mined in North Dakota which can stop moisture when it is wet. However, he said once the substance dries out its waterproofing ability is lost.

The suit further alleges that the firm refused to honor guarantees on its work. Douglas said the guarantee contains restrictions which make it "a mere sham."

The suit requests a temporary injunction to block further sales by the firm, restitution to past customers and payment of court fees.

However, Douglas' suit, filed in Lancaster District Court, does not ask for punitive damages from the firm.

Fennell said an attempt was made to negotiate with the firm to halt its operations, but it failed.

Douglas said the suit is the fruit of a "very thorough and extensive investigation" which is continuing into the operations of other waterproofing firms.

He advised the public to be careful when contracting with waterproofing companies, and to contact the consumer protection division if problems arise.

Bycroft Ordered To Repay Bank

Kearney (AP) — A recent District Court decision that Ronald Bycroft fraudulently withdrew $83,637 in assets from the Elm Creek State Bank was but one aspect of the final decision.

Deciding in favor of the bank and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC), the bank's receiver, Judge Donald Weaver has ordered Bycroft, former board chairman of the bank, to repay the money he took from the bank, plus 8% interest.

Although Bycroft, who now is employed here, said he would undoubtedly appeal the decision to the Nebraska Supreme Court, his attorney said such action is not possible because a notice of appeal was not filed within the required 10-day limit after the June 23 ruling.

A routine audit by the Nebraska State Banking Dept. found that the bank was insolvent, and closed the bank. The bank was formally declared insolvent May 5, and the FDIC was appointed receiver a short time later.

Charles Mitchell of the State Banking Dept. said he doubts the bank will ever reopen because its state charter was relinquished when the FDIC took control.

Alliance Park Renamed For Laing

Alliance — Due to action taken by the Alliance City Council, the North Park located in Alliance will be renamed Laing Park in honor of retired city manager Roberts W. Laing. An Alliance native, Laing served as city clerk for 10 years until he was promoted to city manager in 1947. He retired in 1972. During his service Laing proposed the park plans and the city acquired the land largely with federal outdoor recreation funds.

Ceresco, Fullerton Youths Awarded

Two incoming freshmen from Ceresco and Fullerton have been awarded Federal Land Bank scholarships to attend the University of Nebraska-Lincoln College of Agriculture. They are Mitchell G. Otto, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Otto of Ceresco, and Kevin D. Wetovick, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. August Wetovick of Fullerton.

Higher School Budget OKd

Lexington (UPI) — The Lexington School Board has approved an operating budget of $1,591,000 for the 1975-76 school year, an increase of $150,000 over last year's budget. School officials said the 10% increase in the budget was due primarily to increased operating costs and salary raises for teachers. The mill levy will be raised 2.92 mills from 51.11 mills to 54.03 mills.

Nichol Sells Credit Bureau

Scottsbluff (AP) — The Credit Bureau of Scottsbluff, Inc., has been sold by State Sen. William E. Nichol to Jerry Laws of Scottsbluff. The sale includes reporting and collection departments and the building that houses the bureau. Laws has been an employe of the bureau for seven years and manager of the collection department. Nichol purchased the credit bureau in 1960.

Hearing Planned On Budget

Kearney (UPI) — A public hearing is scheduled here tonight on the 1975-76 operating budget for the city of Kearney, with discussion expected to focus on a proposed one per cent city sales tax. City officials said property owners are paying a 19.70 mill levy for operations and bond retirement. If a property tax were to be used for operating the city for the next fiscal year, the levy would probably increase to 21 mills, officials said. However, officials said a one per cent sales tax could replace the equivalent of about 21 mills of property tax revenue.

Poisoning Kills Columbus Man

Vinton, Iowa (AP) — A traveling salesman with a family in Nebraska died when he pulled off the road to sleep in his car near Vinton.

Death was attributed to carbon monoxide poisoning.

Authorities ruled the death of Eugene Wennekamp, 40, of Morrison, Ill., was an accident. His body was discovered on U.S. 30 Monday.

Wennekamp's family lives in Columbus, Neb. Funeral services will be at 9:30 a.m. Thursday at St. Bonaventure Catholic Church in Columbus.

Students Get Grants

Two University of Nebraska-Lincoln electrical engineering students have been awarded $200 W. H. Sawyer Scholarships for the 1975-76 school year. The students are Thad Genrich, a junior from Elgin, and Dannie Walker, a senior and a Creighton Community High School graduate.

EARL HAWKS . . . offers 'morning paper' at Arizona fair.

He Really Started Living After Becoming A Clown

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

The semi-retired farmer-businessman has both Mayo Brothers and an aging Ringling Brothers clown to thank for the valuable "medical advice." Recovering from a stroke nine years ago, he happened to share a hospital room with the Ringling circus professional.

"Just before he was to have surgery for removal of his voice box, the old fellow told me I should try clowning for relaxation," reflected Hawks, 68. "I started out as a Shrine amateur but enjoyed it so much I turned to doing quite a bit of it professionally."

"Sunshine the Clown" was since worked several states, a three-week stint through the Southwest being the longest so far. A bigger thrill was a few days' substituting with the prestigious Ringling Brothers Circus while traveling in California.

Except for a few weeks during the year, however, the appearances are occasional and voluntary. Often joined by fellow Shriners Clarence Wright and Bill Easton of Hebron and Albert Kassik, Jr., of Milligan, Earl especially enjoys their visits to hospitals and nursing homes.

"It's done me a lot of good," said the native Thayer countian, born on the 800-acre farm he now rents out. "I also love flying, but that's a hobby which brings happiness only to oneself. Clowning shares happiness with others."

Both Hawks and wife Pauline are licensed pilots who helped organize the Nebraska Flying Farmers and Ranchers in 1946. Thus the name, well known in the several counties they chose for their "Flying Hawks Ranch."

On Highway 4 one mile south and four east of Bruning, the site has gradually expanded into a mini-village of 13. Among its facilities are a 3,000-foot airport runway, a two-unit motel, cabins and a small recreation area.

Mrs. Hawks also operates a beauty shop and travels with her husband whenever possible. Her busy fingers also are responsible for his seven clown costumes.

A member of Sesostris Temple of Lincoln, he was that Shrine group's "Clown of the Year" in 1972. Something of a trademark is his home-made band organ, reputedly the only one in the nation played by a clown.

Norfolk MD To Head Malpractice Project

By The Associated Press

A Norfolk physician, Dr. James Dunlap, has been named by the Nebraska Medical Association to head a program aimed at finding a solution to the medical malpractice insurance crisis in the state.

Dr. Warren G. Bosley of Grand Island, association president, said the situation is urgent.

"If physicians cannot purchase professional liability insurance, they simply cannot practice," said Bosley.

Even if doctors can get the insurance, Bosley said, "but only at a very high rate, then that rate becomes an inflated figure in the cost of operating the office."

He added that those operating costs must be passed on to the patient in the form of higher fees for medical care.

Dunlap said the state may face a "catastrophe" in the near future if something is not done immediately.

Dunlap said that unlike incidents in California and other states, members of the Nebraska Medical Association do not favor going out on strike or boycotting to protest the fast rising costs of malpractice insurance.

Dunlap said many doctors are quitting practice in the state now, and others simply can't afford the malpractice insurance premiums.

Compared to figures for the state five years ago, Dunlap said the number of malpractice claims against doctors has doubled, and the settlements in the cases are now averaging 2½ times what they used to.

Colorado Police Catch Ogallala Jail Escapees

Brush, Colo. (AP) — Two escapees from the Keith County Jail in Ogallala, Neb., were arrested here Monday night.

Police said Steven Hirsch of Denver and John Green of Waterloo, Iowa, both 20, abandoned the vehicle they were driving near the northeastern Colorado town of Merino and walked into Brush, where they were arrested.

Hirsch was being held on a petty larceny charge and Green was being held on armed robbery charges.

Effects Of Power Plants On Chadron Air Studied

Chadron (AP) — The air and water in the Chadron area may not be as pure as some remote places such as the South Pole, but they are considerably cleaner than in most metropolitan areas.

That is one conclusion reached by the research of Dr. Arthur Struempler, chairman of the Division of Science and Mathematics at Chadron State College.

Dr. Struempler's ongoing study will try to determine the effect on the area when a half dozen coal fired power plants are constructed in neighboring western states.

The Chadron area is east and downwind from the plants and will be in the path of some of the waste material the plants and mines produce.

He analyzes the amount of silver, aluminum, cadmium, cobalt, copper, lead, thallium and zinc in the air, rain and ground water. His studies can measure metallic concentrations in parts per billion.

Dr. Struempler receives samples from students and does nearly all his research on Saturdays. He usually writes summaries of the research in the early morning hours.

His study shows that trace metals found in air and water in western Nebraska are now largely derived from the soil.

District 74 Future Disputed In G.I.

Grand Island (UPI) — Two Grand Island area groups are opposing each other over the future of Public School District 74 and whether the district should be eliminated and merged with the Grand Island school system.

A crowd of more than 100 persons filed the Hall County District Courtroom here Monday night for a public hearing on the dissolving of District 74, which is adjacent to the Grand Island system.

One group wants to retain the district and has filed suit in district court seeking to prevent the county school superintendent from dissolving the district.

Duane Nelson, a lawyer representing the group, said the revised state law under which District 74 may be dissolved does not apply and should not be used to eliminate the school district.

District 74 does not contain any public schools within its boundaries. School age children in the district have been attending Grand Island schools for the past two years on a contract basis.

Linda Galusha, a resident of the district who favors a merger with Grand Island, said persons opposing dissolution were not interested in quality education for their children.

She said the issue is monetary, contending opponents "don't want to have to pay" for educating their children through school taxes and would rather continue contracting.

Betty Saunders, county school superintendent, presided over the hearing and said there was no action she could take until after a July 25 court hearing that would decide whether she can dissolve the district at her discretion.

G.I. Budget Jumps 21%

Grand Island (UPI) — The city council gave unanimous approval Monday night to a budget of $26.9 million for fiscal 1975-76.

The total is $4.5 million higher than last year's, but the 21% jump resulted from inclusion of federal community development funds and revenue from the sale of power, which were not included in previous budgets.

City Manager John Carpenter said the spending proposal shows expansion of service in only one area: construction of an 18-hole municipal golf course. The city will put up $154,000, plus $80,000 earmarked previously, to pay its half for construction of the $471,000 course. Federal funds will pay for the other half.

The budget also includes $20,000 for a civic center study and an across-the-board 8% salary boost for city employes.

Carpenter said the budget was held down by a decision to replace certain city equipment by using federal revenue-sharing money, if possible, rather than city funds.

NW Bell Plans Hike Thursday

Omaha (AP) — Northwestern Bell Telephone officials say they plan to put their new, higher telephone rates into effect Thursday.

The date must be approved by the Nebraska Public Service Commission (PSC), a Bell spokesman said Tuesday.

The PSC has already approved the rate hikes, giving the company permission to increase rates by about $5.3 million annually. Bell originally asked for an increase of about $16 million.

The new rates will affect regular customers on Northwestern Bell's 95 exchanges in the state, as well as long distances callers within the state.

They Told Us To Let Him Go

Lexington (UPI) — An Oklahoma man, wanted in San Bernadino, Calif., on an armed robbery charge, was being sought Tuesday in Nebraska and Oklahoma, despite spending last weekend in the Dawson County Jail here.

Ellis D. Campbell, 32, Centrahoma, Okla., Saturday asked the Lexington Police Department for Salvation Army traveler's assistance, which is administered by the police.

Campbell's wife made the initial request, but was told by police she would need her husband's identification. Campbell, who had been waiting in a parked car along with his two children, provided the identification, which was checked through the National Crime Information Computer, indicating he was wanted for armed robbery in California.

The sheriff's office said Campbell waived extradition to California, but California authorities ordered Campbell released because they could not find the complaining witness for the armed robbery charge.

Campbell was released Monday, and 30 minutes later, the sheriff's office said, California authorities said they found the witness and requested that Campbell be held.

By that time, the sheriff's office said, Campbell had picked up his wife and two children at a Lexington motel and was gone. Oklahoma authorities were asked to be on the lookout for Campbell.

School Building Costs Estimated At North Platte

North Platte (AP) — Overall costs of a proposed school construction project here are estimated at between $9.7 million and $10 million, architects told the North Platte Board of Education Monday night.

The board expects to decide Aug. 11 whether it should call for a bond election to finance the project.

The proposed project includes a new junior high school, a new elemetary school and major additions to six other elementary schools.

Proposed Omaha Budget 'Bone Dry'

Omaha (UPI) — Mayor Edward Zorinsky's near bone-dry fiscal 1976 budget received a mixed reception from Omaha City Council members and department heads Tuesday, but mayoral aides contended the $83 million proposal wouldn't trigger a cut in services.

The 300-page request, which requires no property tax increase, was 2.5% less than the $85.2 million officials estimate city operations will cost during the year. Zorinsky conceded a new form of city revenue must be found.

Zorinsky remained on a visit to Poland, and his budget was submitted to the council without verbal comment, but contained a written message from the mayor.

Council President Robert Cunningham said in his opinion there was "absolutely no doubt" that the proposal would result in a decrease of services, adding, "I think it's criminal. It's an irresponsible budget."

Zorinsky's Management and Budget Director Robert Armstrong said, however, present services could be maintained with increased efficiency.

"We feel that with better management we can get better production out of the employes," Armstrong said.

When asked about the proposed $100,000 cut in his department's gasoline budget, Police Chief Richard Anderson said he "questioned" whether the funds remaining would be "adequate."

Employe salaries account for 62.6% or $35.6 million of the city's operating budget compared with an estimated 61% or $31.5 million this year and 57.5% in 1974. Police and fire salaries have yet to be determined, and City Finance Director George Richardson estimated the city could have a final 1976 salary bill of $38 million.

Overall salaries would increase by more than 10%, but employes who resign or retire for the most part won't be replaced.

Zorinsky slashed allocations for capital improvements, outside services, commodities and equipment. The 1974 capital improvement allocation was $15.1 million while it was $11.2 million this year. In 1976, the amount is $6.9 million.

Overall, the largest percentage of the budget pie, 27.1%, goes to public works. Other operations such as planning and legal work account for 24.8%; fire and police, 23.8%; debt retirement, 15.1% and parks and recreation, 9.2%.

Of the income, 52.5% will be derived from the property tax, 16.2% from the gas tax, 11.8% from the wheel gas tax, 7.8% from sewer use fees and others, and 6.5% from federal revenue sharing. The remaining 5.2% will be derived from "other" sources.

Morgan May Seek Stop In Douglas County Hiring

Omaha (AP) — Douglas County Commissioner P. J. Morgan says he may ask for an absolute freeze on county government hiring.

Morgan said Tuesday that he is considering the hiring freeze proposal because of the county's 1975-76 budget proposals and the county's revenue prospects.

Requests from department heads are up $4.5 million, or 15% more than last year.

This year's requests total $52.5 million.

The county is at its legal tax levy ceiling, 14.28 mills ($14.28 per $1,000 of assessed valuation), and the increase in the property valuations in the county will yield only about $880,000 more in taxes, Morgan said.

Morgan is also questioning several other proposed county expenditures, most notably the county's $500,000 share of the maintenance costs for the new city-county building.

Omaha Moving Teachers To Comply

Omaha (AP) — The Board of Education gave approval at a special meeting Monday to transfers of 134 teachers to different buildings to comply with court-ordered integration.

Ron Anderson, assistant superintendent for the Department of Staff Personnel Services, said reassignments would affect 61 of the district's 93 buildings.

Anderson said he had no breakdown on how many of the teachers were white and how many were black, but thought the numbers were about even.

Prior to the meeting, the Rev. R. F. Jenkins, one of two black members of the board, said some teachers had complained to him of the transfers, saying their salaries had been lowered.

Anderson said no teacher's base salary or fringe benefits had been affected by the action but that pay for "extra duty" assignments — coaching, teaching music, sponsoring yearbooks — could fluctuate depending on needs of the schools into which they were moved.

"We never make the extra duty assignments until late August," he said, and therefore could not say how many teachers' actual pay would be affected.

Decisions on teachers to be reassigned, he said, were made from five criteria: Certification, a review of performance records, education, special training and experience.

He said the transfers would create a ratio in each school of white teachers to black which is near the district-wide employment ratio.

Omaha Contractors Will Seek Order Ending Strike Of Operating Engineers

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha Building Contractors Employers Association will seek a court order requiring members of striking Operating Engineers Local 571 to return to work and stop picketing, Dean Kratz, the group's attorney, said Tuesday.

Douglas County District Court Judge John Clark Monday issued a similar restraining order for the Peter Kiewit Sons' Co. Kiewit doesn't belong to the contractors association, which represents about 30 firms.

Kratz said the contractors say the engineers' walkout which began June 25, violates a no-strike clause in a three-year contract signed last year. The contractors and union haven't been able to reach agreement on a second-year pay raise.

The picketing has shut down about 15 area building projects and idled 4,000 construction workers.

Kratz said the contractors didn't seek a restraining order earlier because they thought the strike could be settled without legal action.

A Kiewit spokesman said crews, including operating engineers, were returning to their jobs Tuesday, and work was starting again on the company's projects, including the downtown library, Creighton University-St. Joseph Hospital and the Kellogg Co. plant addition.

Officials of the operating engineers union couldn't be reached for comment.

Painters Reach Tentative Pact

Omaha (AP) — A tentative agreement has been reached between Painters Union Local 109 and the Omaha Chapter of the Painting and Decorating Contractors, a spokesman said late Monday.

Kent Frazier of the Federal Mediation Service said the agreement is subject to ratification by a special membership meeting of the union scheduled for Thursday.

He said no details of the agreement would be announced until the meeting. The union went on strike June 1.

Sales Tax Is Eyed By Hastings

Some council members feel that if the sales tax proposal is not adopted, some city services may have to be cut, and other city needs will have to be postponed.

The Kearney City Council will hold hearings on a proposed 1% sales tax Wednesday night.

Waterproofing Firm Sued By State Consumer Unit

The state went to court Tuesday seeking restitution on behalf of homeowners in the Lincoln and Omaha areas who have been victimized by a basement waterproofing firm whose work has been the subject of several complaints by Nebraskans.

The suit, filed by Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas against Hydro-Tech Systems, Inc., is the first major court action taken by Douglas' consumer protection division since it was formed last January.

Jerold Fennell, chief of the consumer protection division, said he had received 16 "direct" complaints from customers of the firm who claimed their basements continued to leak.

Fennell estimated that possibly as many as 100 Nebraskans may have been victimized by the firm.

Homeowners contacted thrus far indicated they paid the firm from $300 to $1,500 each depending on the extent of the work to have their basements waterproofed.

Hydro-Tech uses a substance called bentonite to waterproof basements. Fennell said bentonite is a volcanic clay mined in North Dakota which can stop moisture when it is wet. However, he said once the substance dries out its waterproofing ability is lost.

The suit further alleges that the firm refused to honor guarantees on its work. Douglas said the guarantee contains restrictions which make it "a mere sham."

The suit requests a temporary injunction to block further sales by the firm, restitution to past customers and payment of court fees.

However, Douglas' suit, filed in Lancaster District Court, does not ask for punitive damages from the firm.

Fennell said an attempt was made to negotiate with the firm to halt its operations, but it failed.

Douglas said the suit is the fruit of a "very thorough and extensive investigation" which is continuing into the operations of other waterproofing firms.

He advised the public to be careful when contracting with waterproofing companies, and to contact the consumer protection division if problems arise.

Bycroft Ordered To Repay Bank

Kearney (AP) — A recent District Court decision that Ronald Bycroft fraudulently withdrew $83,637 in assets from the Elm Creek State Bank was but one aspect of the final decision.

Deciding in favor of the bank and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC), the bank's receiver, Judge Donald Weaver has ordered Bycroft, former board chairman of the bank, to repay the money he took from the bank, plus 8% interest.

Although Bycroft, who now is employed here, said he would undoubtedly appeal the decision to the Nebraska Supreme Court, his attorney said such action is not possible because a notice of appeal was not filed within the required 10-day limit after the June 23 ruling.

A routine audit by the Nebraska State Banking Dept. found that the bank was insolvent, and closed the bank. The bank was formally declared insolvent May 5, and the FDIC was appointed receiver a short time later.

Charles Mitchell of the State Banking Dept. said he doubts the bank will ever reopen because its state charter was relinquished when the FDIC took control

Alliance Park Renamed For Laing

Alliance — Due to action taken by the Alliance City Council, the North Park located in Alliance will be renamed Laing Park in honor of retired city manager Roberts W. Laing. An Alliance native, Laing served as city clerk for 10 years until he was promoted to city manager in 1947. He retired in 1972. During his service Laing proposed the park plans and the city acquired the land largely with federal outdoor recreation funds.

Higher School Budget OKd

Lexington (UPI) — The Lexington School Board has approved an operating budget of $1,591,000 for the 1975-76 school year, an increase of $150,000 over last year's budget. School officials said the 10% increase in the budget was due primarily to increased operating costs and salary raises for teachers. The mill levy will be raised 2.92 mills from 51.11 mills to 54.03 mills.

Nichol Sells Credit Bureau

Scottsbluff (AP) — The Credit Bureau of Scottsbluff, Inc., has been sold by State Sen. William E. Nichol to Jerry Laws of Scottsbluff. The sale includes reporting and collection departments and the building that houses the bureau. Laws has been an employe of the bureau for seven years and manager of the collection department. Nichol purchased the credit bureau in 1960.

Hearing Planned On Budget

Kearney (UPI) — A public hearing is scheduled here tonight on the 1975-76 operating budget for the city of Kearney, with discussion expected to focus on a proposed one per cent city sales tax. City officials said property owners are paying a 19.70 mill levy for operations and bond retirement. If a property tax were to be used for operating the city for the next fiscal year, the levy would probably increase to 21 mills, officials said However, officials said a one per cent sales tax could replace the equivalent of about 21 mills of property tax revenue.

Poisoning Kills Columbus Man

Vinton, Iowa (AP) — A traveling salesman with a family in Nebraska died when he pulled off the road to sleep in his car near Vinton.

Death was attributed to carbon monoxide poisoning.

Authorities ruled the death of Eugene Wennekamp, 40, of Morrison, Ill., was an accident. His body was discovered on U.S. 30 Monday.

Wennekamp's family lives in Columbus, Neb. Funeral services will be at 9:30 a.m. Thursday at St. Bonaventure Catholic Church in Columbus.

He Really Started Living After Becoming A Clown

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

The semi-retired farmer-businessman has both Mayo Brothers and an aging Ringling Brothers clown to thank for the valuable "medical advice." Recovering from a stroke nine years ago, he happened to share a hospital room with the Ringling circus professional.

"Just before he was to have surgery for removal of his voice box, the old fellow told me I should try clowning for relaxation," reflected Hawks, 68. "I started out as a Shrine amateur but enjoyed it so much I turned to doing quite a bit of it professionally."

"Sunshine the Clown" was since worked several states, a three-week stint through the Southwest being the longest so far. A bigger thrill was a few days' substituting with the prestigious Ringling Brothers Circus while traveling in California.

Except for a few weeks during the year, however, the appearances are occasional and voluntary Often joined by fellow Shriners Clarence Wright and Bill Easton of Hebron and Albert Kassik, Jr., of Milligan. Earl especially enjoys their visits to hospitals and nursing homes.

"It's done me a lot of good," said the native Thayer countian, born on the 800-acre farm he now rents out. "I also love flying, but that's a hobby which brings happiness only to oneself Clowning shares happiness with others."

Both Hawks and wife Pauline are licensed pilots who helped organize the Nebraska Flying Farmers and Ranchers in 1946. Thus the name, well known in the several counties they chose for their "Flying Hawks Ranch."

On Highway 4 one mile south and four east of Bruning, the site has gradually expanded into a mini-village of 13. Among its facilities are a 3,000-foot airport runway, a two-unit motel, cabins and a small recreation area.

Mrs. Hawks also operates a beauty shop and travels with her husband whenever possible. Her busy fingers also are responsible for his seven clown costumes.

A special room in their house is reserved for clown memorabilia, scrapbooks, plaques and paintings. Earl is especially proud of a Clown of America Award presented by the Professional Clowns Assn

A member of Sesostris Temple of Lincoln, he was that Shrine group's "Clown of the Year" in 1972 Something of a trademark is his home-made band organ, reputedly the only one in the nation played by a clown

Norfolk MD To Head Malpractice Project

By The Associated Press

A Norfolk physician, Dr. James Dunlap, has been named by the Nebraska Medical Association to head a program aimed at finding a solution to the medical malpractice insurance crisis in the state.

Dr. Warren G. Bosley of Grand Island, association president, said the situation is urgent.

"If physicians cannot purchase professional liability insurance, they simply cannot practice," said Bosley.

Even if doctors can get the insurance, Bosley said, "but only at a very high rate, then that rate becomes an inflated figure in the cost of operating the office."

He added that those operating costs must be passed on to the patient in the form of higher fees for medical care.

Dunlap said the state may face a "catastrophe" in the near future if something is not done immediately.

Dunlap said that unlike incidents in California and other states, members of the Nebraska Medical Association do not favor going out on strike or boycotting to protest the fast rising costs of malpractice insurance.

Dunlap said many doctors are quitting practice in the state now, and others simply can't afford the malpractice insurance premiums.

Compared to figures for the state five years ago, Dunlap said the number of malpractice claims against doctors has doubled, and the settlements in the cases are now averaging 2½ times what they used to.

Colorado Police Catch Ogallala Jail Escapees

Brush, Colo. (AP) — Two escapees from the Keith County Jail in Ogallala, Neb., were arrested here Monday night.

Police said Steven Hirsch of Denver and John Green of Waterloo, Iowa, both 20, abandoned the vehicle they were driving near the northeastern Colorado town of Merino and walked into Brush, where they were arrested.

Hirsch was being held on a petty larceny charge and Green was being held on armed robbery charges.

Effects Of Power Plants On Chadron Air Studied

Chadron (AP) — The air and water in the Chadron area may not be as pure as some remote places such as the South Pole, but they are considerably cleaner than in most metropolitan areas.

That is one conclusion reached by the research of Dr. Arthur Struempler, chairman of the Division of Science and Mathematics at Chadron State College.

Dr. Struempler's ongoing study will try to determine the effect on the area when a half dozen coal fired power plants are constructed in neighboring western states.

The Chadron area is east and downwind from the plants and will be in the path of some of the waste material the plants and mines produce.

He analyzes the amount of silver, aluminum, cadmium, cobalt, copper, lead, thallium and zinc in the air, rain and ground water. His studies can measure metallic concentrations in parts per billion.

Dr. Struempler receives samples from students and does nearly all his research on Saturdays. He usually writes summaries of the research in the early morning hours.

His study shows that trace metals found in air and water in western Nebraska are now largely derived from the soil

Psychologists Help Troubled Students

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

The test kit for psychological evaluation, which traditionally has been the trademark of school psychologists, is still a mainstay of the profession.

However, no longer are school psychologists at the Lincoln Public Schools (LPS) simply conducting assessment tests and reporting the results, then leaving the correction of students' learning problems to someone else.

In fact, seven school psychologists, who each year work with approximately 1,000 students in the Lincoln schools, have found their roles markedly broadened during the past few years.

"Seven years ago, when we had only two psychologists, all we would do is make an assessment of the child's problem and write a report on it," said Dr. Eldon Heskett, LPS director of student services. "Although we still do that, now we can do even more."

Initiate Programs

Today, in addition to giving psychological testing to diagnose learning problems, LPS school psychologists have become instrumental in initiating and designing programs for student services, and have gained additional expertise in certain areas such as teacher effectiveness training, learning disabilities and basic learning skills.

This role expansion has occurred because, in dealing with learning problems, "the people in the schools are becoming more aware of what is needed," Heskett said. "So, they want more than just the psychologists' test kits. They want more services."

Although LPS psychologists do not provide actual therapy or intensive treatment to students with learning problems, they aid in the correction of the problem by making suggestions of ways of dealing with it during periodic consultations with parents and teachers.

"The psychologist is the key in diagnosing and identifying the student's problem," said Dr. Robert Buckner, LPS psychologist. These problems may be learning problems, such as underachievement or different degrees of mental retardation, or personal or social problems.

"We spend a lot of time with the kids in an assessment capacity," he added. "Then we consult with the parents and teachers, because they work with the child and spend most of their time with them."

Simplify Learning

With some students, correcting a learning problem may be done by "accurately identifying what skill a child needs to learn in the achievement area and by simplifying the learning task," Buckner said.

"In other cases, it is a matter of looking at the student's motivation — why he may not be as involved in learning as you would," he said. "Perhaps it is a matter of the way the teacher is presenting (the material to be learned)."

Another factor may be the student's relationship with his parents — "interaction going on between parent and child" — or possible lack of encouragement for doing a good job, Buckner explained.

Since LPS psychologists work so closely with Lincoln teachers and are actively involved in program planning, a good relationship with other school personnel is imperative, Buckner and Heskett agreed.

"We want a colleague relationship with other school personnel," Buckner said. "We don't want to be the outside expert who is just called in when there is a problem."

Rather, Buckner believes that LPS psychologists should be one more "resource" from which teachers can draw to make wiser decisions regarding their students.

'Colleague' System

For the most part, Heskett feels that this "colleague" relationship has developed and can be perpetuated, since LPS psychologists have been assigned to various schools within the district.

"I think the teacher generally has accepted this help we can offer," he said. "Teachers are more flexible and receptive of the psychologists' services than they once were.

"And they are very understanding of the psychological services (offered)."

"Also, teachers are doing a much better job in recognizing when additional help is needed," Heskett added. "And they are getting that outside help when they need it, which is always a sign of strength.

"When a teacher recognizes a problem today, she doesn't say, 'Get that problem out of my classroom.' She is more apt to say, 'What can I do to help?' "

According to Heskett, LPS psychologists have welcomed the recent changes and consider the additional responsibilities a challenge.

"We are feeling more pride (in our work)," Buckner said.

"And I have seen very positive attitudes (about the broadened role) in other psychologists here," Heskett said.

Mother Feels Slighted When Son Keeps Dog

DEAR ABBY: I am highly allergic to dogs. The odor of dogs makes me sick. I can even smell it on people's clothing.

My problem is that my son has married a dog lover, and they have a dog.

I explained to them what my problem was and even offered to buy my daughter-in-law a monkey or any other kind of pet she wanted if only she would get rid of the dog. So far, she still has the dog.

Of course I can't go over to their place, and when they come to see me, the odor of their dog is on them, and I can't tolerate it for long.

It seems to me that my daughter-in-law could live without a dog if she had to choose between having one and seeing me. What do you think?

HURT

DEAR HURT: Asking dog lover to get rid of her dog is asking a lot. But I agree, people are more important than dogs. Or they should be.

DEAR ABBY: I've been a widow for two years and have relocated to a completely different area where I have no close friends and no one to talk to about this.

I met a gentleman last year, and I like him very, very much. He wants to marry me, but I don't want to relinquish my freedom.

I do not want a legal tie with him for one reason. He is addicted to alcohol. He seems to handle it wisely, but I don't want to be his wife. Also, we are both in business and I need some time to myself. I enjoy his company enormously, however, and we are compatible in every way. I am 57 and he is 63.

I've considered suggesting to him the new "living together" arrangement so many younger people now find to their liking. He's pressuring me for an answer.

What do you say?

"57 AND HOLDING"

DEAR "57": Remain holding. Don't marry him feeling as you do. And don't suggest living together, either. Continue to see him as long as you enjoy his company, but if he gives you an "either-or," take the "or."

DEAR ABBY: The problem briefly: Our daughter (a good student at an out-of-town college) recently volunteered the information that she is a lesbian. We were stunned since we had no inkling of this.

After discussions and correspondence on the subject, she flatly refuses any form of counseling and says that she is happy at the present time and sees no need to change.

What more can we as parents do to keep her from ruining her life? We love her.

NEW YORKER

DEAR NEW YORKER: Why do you assume that her sexual preference will necessarily "ruin" her life? If you love her, accept her as she is and let her know it.

DEAR ABBY: Now that I am a man in my 70s, I am the object of some belittling remarks concerning my virility — or the lack of it, from younger men.

I can't complain, having been guilty of the same thing when I was younger.

I recall having once told a newly married senior citizen (as a "joke," of course) that I doubted his ability to satisfy his young wife. He replied, "You wouldn't want to bet your wife on it, would you?"

I replied, "You mean my LIFE, don't you?"

"No," he shot back, "I mean your WIFE!"

Realizing what he meant, I kept my mouth shut, and I never made a remark like that again.

SR. CITIZEN IN ALA.

CONFIDENTIAL TO C.J. IN HOUSTON: The girl who steals your fiance steals your troubles. Let her have him. He's too wishy-washy to make a good husband.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Proposed Omaha Budget 'Bone Dry'

Omaha (UPI) — Mayor Edward Zorinsky's near bone-dry fiscal 1976 budget received a mixed reception from Omaha City Council members and department heads Tuesday, but mayoral aides contended the $83 million proposal wouldn't trigger a cut in services

The 300-page request, which requires no property tax increase, was 2.5% less than the $85.2 million officials estimate city operations will cost during the year. Zorinsky conceded a new form of city revenue must be found.

Zorinsky remained on a visit to Poland, and his budget was submitted to the council without verbal comment, but contained a written message from the mayor.

Council President Robert Cunningham said in his opinion there was "absolutely no doubt" that the proposal would result in a decrease of services, adding, "I think it's criminal It's an irresponsible budget "

Zorinsky's Management and Budget Director Robert Armstrong said, however, present services could be maintained with increased efficiency

"We feel that with better management we can get better production out of the employes," Armstrong said.

When asked about the proposed $100,000 cut in his department's gasoline budget, Police Chief Richard Anderson said he "questioned" whether the funds remaining would be "adequate."

Employe salaries account for 62.6% or $35 6 million of the city's operating budget compared with an estimated 61% or $31.5 million this year and 57 5% in 1974. Police and fire salaries have yet to be determined, and City Finance Director George Richardson estimated the city could have a final 1976 salary bill of $38 million.

Overall salaries would increase by more than 10%, but employes who resign or retire for the most part won't be replaced.

Zorinsky slashed allocations for capital improvements, outside services, commodities and equipment. The 1974 capital improvement allocation was $15.1 million while it was $11.2 million this year. In 1976, the amount is $6.9 million.

Overall, the largest percentage of the budget pie, 27.1%, goes to public works. Other operations such as planning and legal work account for 24.8%; fire and police, 23 8%; debt retirement, 15.1% and parks and recreation, 9.2%.

Of the income, 52.5% will be derived from the property tax, 16.2% from the gas tax, 11.8% from the wheel gas tax, 7.8% from sewer use fees and others, and 6.5% from federal revenue sharing. The remaining 5.2% will be derived from "other" sources.

Morgan May Seek Stop In Douglas County Hiring

Omaha (AP) — Douglas County Commissioner P. J. Morgan says he may ask for an absolute freeze on county government hiring.

Morgan said Tuesday that he is considering the hiring freeze proposal because of the county's 1975-76 budget proposals and the county's revenue prospects.

Requests from department heads are up $4.5 million, or 15% more than last year.

This year's requests total $52.5 million.

The county is at its legal tax levy ceiling, 14.28 mills ($14.28 per $1,000 of assessed valuation), and the increase in the property valuations in the county will yield only about $880,000 more in taxes, Morgan said.

Morgan is also questioning several other proposed county expenditures, most notably the county's $500,000 share of the maintenance costs for the new city-county building.

Omaha Moving Teachers To Comply

Omaha (AP) — The Board of Education gave approval at a special meeting Monday to transfers of 134 teachers to different buildings to comply with court-ordered integration

Ron Anderson, assistant superintendent for the Department of Staff Personnel Services, said reassignments would affect 61 of the district's 93 buildings

Anderson said he had no breakdown on how many of the teachers were white and how many were black, but thought the numbers were about even.

Prior to the meeting, the Rev. R F Jenkins, one of two black members of the board, said some teachers had complained to him of the transfers, saying their salaries had been lowered.

Anderson said no teacher's base salary or fringe benefits had been affected by the action but that pay for "extra duty" assignments — coaching, teaching music, sponsoring yearbooks — could fluctuate depending on needs of the schools into which they were moved.

"We never make the extra duty assignments until late August," he said, and therefore could not say how many teachers' actual pay would be affected

Decisions on teachers to be reassigned, he said, were made from five criteria: Certification, a review of performance records, education, special training and experience.

He said the transfers would create a ratio in each school of white teachers to black which is near the district-wide employment ratio.

Omaha Contractors Will Seek Order Ending Strike Of Operating Engineers

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha Building Contractors Employers Association will seek a court order requiring members of striking Operating Engineers Local 571 to return to work and stop picketing, Dean Kratz, the group's attorney, said Tuesday

Douglas County District Court Judge John Clark Monday issued a similar restraining order for the Peter Kiewit Sons' Co Kiewit doesn't belong to the contractors association, which represents about 30 firms

Kratz said the contractors say the engineers' walkout which began June 25, violates a no-strike clause in a three-year contract signed last year The contractors and union haven't been able to reach agreement on a second-year pay raise

The picketing has shut down about 15 area building projects and idled 4,000 construction workers

Kratz said the contractors didn't seek a restraining order earlier because they thought the strike could be settled without legal action

A Kiewit spokesman said crews, including operating engineers, were returning to their jobs Tuesday, and work was starting again on the company's projects, including the downtown library, Creighton University-St. Joseph Hospital and the Kellogg Co. plant addition

Officials of the operating engineers union couldn't be reached for comment.

Painters Reach Tentative Pact

Omaha (AP) — A tentative agreement has been reached between Painters Union Local 109 and the Omaha Chapter of the Painting and Decorating Contractors, a spokesman said late Monday

Kent Frazier of the Federal Mediation Service said the agreement is subject to ratification by a special membership meeting of the union scheduled for Thursday.

He said no details of the agreement would be announced until the meeting. The union went on strike June 1.

Sales Tax Is Eyed By Hastings

Some council members feel that if the sales tax proposal is not adopted, some city services may have to be cut, and other city needs will have to be postponed

The Kearney City Council will hold hearings on a proposed 1% sales tax Wednesday night

Old Folks Appreciate Her Style

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

The elderly woman carefully placed a handful of groceries on the counter and waited patiently until those before her checked out.

The checker totaled the groceries, took the elderly woman's money and returned the change.

The woman, now satisfied, hoisted the small bag of groceries into her arms and departed.

Barely a word was uttered throughout the scenario.

"I know what they're looking for, that's all," said Dorothy Cain, head checker at Mr. B's downtown. Mrs. Cain takes extra pains to make her regular customers, particularly the old folks, feel special.

"I just try to treat everybody like they're somebody," Mrs. Cain explained. She's been doing that for 17 years now. And all in the same downtown grocery store that has gone by three different names — Gold's, Brandeis, and now Mr. B. IGA.

"All kinds" shop at the store, Mrs. Cain said. They range from University students, to older people, young people on a shopping spree to businessmen and career women who drop in after work, even some folks from out of town.

But the retired person is Mrs. Cain's most frequent customer.

Through the year, the head checker has become acquainted with the senior citizens' routines.

"Some spend the day, every day, downtown," she said. They ride the bus for a dime on their blue tickets, a special provision for senior citizens.

Many have no money for shopping sprees. Their social security and pension checks barely cover their food and lights, she said. So they take their time making their grocery purchases — and spread the shopping out over the week.

"I'm probably the only contact they have other than their landlord," she said, proud that the old folks have found a friend in her.

"They know me and just want to say hello," she said, smiling pleasantly.

And she still goes out of her way to make them "feel like they're somebody." It's the little things that count, she said. Like "getting the specials right and telling them how much the fruit weighs, what it will cost.

"A lot of them appreciate that," Mrs. Cain said.

"I'm just doing my job," she insisted modestly.

And then she bounced off again to her post at the check-out stand.

The petite woman climbed on the riser at her cash register and was back again making new friends or chatting with the regulars — letting them know that someone cares.

Spray Cans More Costly Than Other Applicators

©The New York Times

New York — Aerosol cans are a convenience but they come to the consumer usually — but not always — at a higher cost, a research project of the New York Public Interest Research Group found.

Paul Chinchar, a Queens College student who coordinated the project, said that the researchers found that when costs per application were worked out under laboratory conditions, the arosol versions were consistently more expensive to use than products under the same brand name used as poured or sprayed liquids, roll-ons or creams.

For example, Arrid Extra Dry Anti-Perspirant Spray in the six ounce aerosol can at $1.42 was found to cost 2.5 cents an application. In the one ounce jar Arrid Anti-Perspirant Cream Deodorant at 89 cents was 1.6 cents an application. And in the 1.5 fluid ounce roll-on applicator at $1.24 the Arrid Anti-Perspirant Roll-on Deodorant was 0.7 cents an application.

Coppertone Suntain Oil was purchased in the two fluid ounce squeeze tube at $1.09, the four fluid ounce squeeze bottle at $1.99 and the six avoirdupois ounce aerosol can at $2.59. The cost per application was 2.6 cents for the tube, 2.8 cents for the bottle and 4.2 cents for the can, according to Christine Owre, staff associate of the research group.

Bactine First Aid Spray was another example. In the two fluid ounce squeeze bottle it cost 2.2 cents an application; in the 4.5 avoirdupois ounce aerosol can the cost per application worked out at 4.7 cents.

In the case of Windex, the glass cleaner, the difference in cost per application between spray bottle and aerosol can was only one-tenth of a cent. But for Solarcaine Sun Burn Lotion there was a 4 cent difference between the cost per application of the lotion in a squeeze bottle and in the aerosol can. Significant differences also were found in paints, waxes and insecticides.

All manufacturers acknowledge that there is a difference in cost. The reason, they say, is that they are selling a branded product with a system for application. The application system is not only convenient but also more effective, Malcolm W. Jensen, president of the Can Manufacturers Institute, explained in an interview.

"This isn't so apparent with some products, but consider paint in an aerosol spray can," he said. "You can buy a brush, and paint thinner, and a brush cleaner, and a mixing bucket and get a good result. Or you can buy a spray can and get a result you can't get with the brush. But you have to pay for a stronger can, a valve, a propellant and a manufacturing process that eliminates thinning and cleaning.

"New products tend to be sold at more competitive prices. But when a product is established, its price reflects its cost."

Doormat Cleans Shoes Automatically

(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — Tired of lazy people ignoring your welcome mat and tracking dirt into your home or office?

A West German company has the solution: an electronic doormat that automatically cleans the shoes of people stepping on it.

The mat is comprised of a series of brushes made of soft plastic, raised about 10 inches above a footboard. When someone steps on the board, the spring loaded brushes are lowered to floor level, where they rotate to clean the shoes.

"Soles and heel are safely supported on the footboard and cleaned," says the company's promotional material.

Some of the electronic doormat's advantages listed by the company are: lower cleaning costs, floor coverings last longer and rooms are kept 'hygienic and aesthetic.'

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

The test kit for psychological evaluation, which traditionally has been the trademark of school psychologists, is still a mainstay of the profession.

However, no longer are school psychologists at the Lincoln Public Schools (LPS) simply conducting assessment tests and reporting the results, then leaving the correction of students' learning problems to someone else.

In fact, seven school psychologists, who each year work with approximately 1,000 students in the Lincoln schools, have found their roles markedly broadened during the past few years.

"Seven years ago, when we had only two psychologists, all we would do is make an assessment of the child's problem and write a report on it," said Dr. Eldon Heskett, LPS director of student services. "Although we still do that, now we can do even more."

Initiate Programs

Today, in addition to giving psychological testing to diagnose learning problems, LPS school psychologists have become instrumental in initiating and designing programs for student services, and have gained additional expertise in certain areas such as teacher effectiveness training, learning disabilities and basic learning skills.

This role expansion has occurred because, in dealing with learning problems, "the people in the schools are becoming more aware of what is needed," Heskett said. "So, they want more than just the psychologists' test kits. They want more services."

Although LPS psychologists do not provide actual therapy or intensive treatment to students with learning problems, they aid in the correction of the problem by making suggestions of ways of dealing with it during periodic consultations with parents and teachers.

"The psychologist is the key in diagnosing and identifying the student's problem," said Dr. Robert Buckner, LPS psychologist. These problems may be learning problems, such as underachievement or different degrees of mental retardation, or personal or social problems.

"We spend a lot of time with the kids in an assessment capacity," he added. "Then we consult with the parents and teachers, because they work with the child and spend most of their time with them."

Simplify Learning

With some students, correcting a learning problem may be done by "accurately identifying what skill a child needs to learn in the achievement area and by simplifying the learning task," Buckner said.

"In other cases, it is a matter of looking at the student's motivation — why he may not be as involved in learning as you would," he said. "Perhaps it is a matter of the way the teacher is presenting (the material to be learned)."

Another factor may be the student's relationship with his parents — "interaction going on between parent and child" — or possible lack of encouragement for doing a good job, Buckner explained.

Since LPS psychologists work so closely with Lincoln teachers and are actively involved in program planning, a good relationship with other school personnel is imperative, Buckner and Heskett agreed.

"We want a colleague relationship with other school personnel," Buckner said. "We don't want to be the outside expert who is just called in when there is a problem."

Rather, Buckner believes that LPS psychologists should be one more "resource" from which teachers can draw to make wiser decisions regarding their students.

'Colleague' System

For the most part, Heskett feels that this "colleague" relationship has developed and can be perpetuated, since LPS psychologists have been assigned to various schools within the district.

"I think the teacher generally has accepted this help we can offer," he said. "Teachers are more flexible and receptive of the psychologists' services than they once were.

"And they are very understanding of the psychological services (offered)."

"Also, teachers are doing a much better job in recognizing when additional help is needed," Heskett added. "And they are getting that outside help when they need it, which is always a sign of strength.

"When a teacher recognizes a problem today, she doesn't say, 'Get that problem out of my classroom.' She is more apt to say, 'What can I do to help?' "

According to Heskett, LPS psychologists have welcomed the recent changes and consider the additional responsibilities a challenge.

"We are feeling more pride (in our work)," Buckner said.

"And I have seen very positive attitudes (about the broadened role) in other psychologists here," Heskett said.

Mother Feels Slighted When Son Keeps Dog

DEAR ABBY: I am highly allergic to dogs. The odor of dogs makes me sick. I can even smell it on people's clothing.

My problem is that my son has married a dog lover, and they have a dog.

I explained to them what my problem was and even offered to buy my daughter-in-law a monkey or any other kind of pet she wanted if only she would get rid of the dog. So far, she still has the dog.

Of course I can't go over to their place, and when they come to see me, the odor of their dog is on them, and I can't tolerate it for long.

It seems to me that my daughter-in-law could live without a dog if she had to choose between having one and seeing me. What do you think?

HURT

DEAR HURT: Asking dog lover to get rid of her dog is asking a lot. But I agree, people are more important than dogs. Or they should be.

DEAR ABBY: I've been a widow for two years and have relocated to a completely different area where I have no close friends and no one to talk to about this.

I met a gentleman last year, and I like him very, very much. He wants to marry me, but I don't want to relinquish my freedom.

I do not want a legal tie with him for one reason. He is addicted to alcohol. He seems to handle it wisely, but I don't want to be his wife. Also, we are both in business and I need some time to myself. I enjoy his company enormously, however, and we are compatible in every way. I am 57 and he is 63.

I've considered suggesting to him the new "living together" arrangement so many younger people now find to their liking. He's pressuring me for an answer.

What do you say?

"57 AND HOLDING"

DEAR "57": Remain holding. Don't marry him feeling as you do. And don't suggest living together, either. Continue to see him as long as you enjoy his company, but if he gives you an "either-or," take the "or."

DEAR ABBY: The problem briefly: Our daughter (a good student at an out-of-town college) recently volunteered the information that she is a lesbian. We were stunned since we had no inkling of this.

After discussions and correspondence on the subject, she flatly refuses any form of counseling and says that she is happy at the present time and sees no need to change.

What more can we as parents do to keep her from ruining her life? We love her.

NEW YORKER

DEAR NEW YORKER: Why do you assume that her sexual preference will necessarily "ruin" her life? If you love her, accept her as she is and let her know it.

DEAR ABBY: Now that I am a man in my 70s, I am the object of some belittling remarks concerning my virility — or the lack of it, from younger men.

I can't complain, having been guilty of the same thing when I was younger.

I recall having once told a newly married senior citizen (as a "joke," of course) that I doubted his ability to satisfy his young wife. He replied, "You wouldn't want to bet your wife on it, would you?"

I replied, "You mean my LIFE, don't you?"

"No," he shot back, "I mean your WIFE!"

Realizing what he meant, I kept my mouth shut, and I never made a remark like that again.

Squirrel Family Welcomed Newcomers To Town

Opal Y. Palmer, the author of today's Write On story, is a free-lance writer who has had several children's articles published in various magazines.

By OPAL Y. PALMER

We had just moved to a new town and had made no friends. The Chatter Family were the first to introduce themselves.

This family of red squirrels became our most intimate neighbors. They borrowed without returning; they imposed upon our privacy without apology. Nevertheless, like most neighbors who have such qualities, they did it with pleasing and unassuming graciousness.

The first request Mrs. Chatter made was for breakfast. One morning I opened the kitchen door and there she sat. When she saw me she chattered a greeting.

I chattered back. She hopped onto the bottom step and visited some more. At my answering reply, she hopped onto the second step. With each additional chatter, her tail waved and twitched above her head.

Interpreting Mrs. Chatter's language to be a request for food, I put an English walnut on the top step. To my disappointment she scurried away without taking it.

After that, we conversed frequently. She often took the breakfast I offered after the door was closed. But usually, the family busied themselves with taking whatever they wanted of whatever we had without asking.

The first treasure that fell to their family larder was a tree full of black walnuts. For days, the family trailed each other among the limbs, pulling walnuts before they were mature enough to fall to the ground.

But one year the walnut tree was not so generous. Come spring, Mr. and Mrs. Chatter and all the Chatterettes were very hungry indeed.

The first things they borrowed were our tender, young lilac buds — all we had. Then, one day I was attracted by greening branches of a weeping willow tree outside an upstairs window doing a rapid, graceful, ballet dance on a windless day.

A bundle of red fur agitating at both ends had stopped on a large limb. When the fur unwound itself, our hungry neighbor thrust his head forward, gnawed off a tender branch, took it in his forepaws, sat on his haunches and gnawed the leaves from the branch as we would eat corn off the cob.

I researched the squirrel. Nowhere did I find that red squirrels are addicted to tender lilac buds and new leaves from weeping willow branches.

This was proof to me that God's little creatures are just as enterprising as any American family. Pioneer families, settling in the treeless west, built sod houses. They learned to eat wild fruits and roots of wild plants in order to survive. They learned new ways of living with that same God-given determination, ingenuity and inspiration which my chattering neighbors portrayed. They survived.

And our Chatter Family survived!

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	2 ♣	3 NT	Pass
4 ♥

Opening lead - king of clubs.

Consider this deal where South got to four hearts on the bidding shown and West led the king of clubs.

Declarer won with the ace and played the ace and another diamond, hoping to ruff two diamonds in dummy. But East won the second diamond with the queen and returned a trump.

Declarer went up with the ace, ruffed the seven of diamonds in dummy, returned to his hand by ruffing a club, and drew East's remaining two trumps, producing this position:

If South now had led a spade to the king — on the basis that West, who had bid two clubs, had the ace — he would have gone down one.

But declarer saw no reason to take an unnecessary risk in this position. So, as a precautionary measure — in case East had the ace of spades instead of West — South exited with the eight of diamonds.

This play proved to be eminently successful when East was forced to win the diamond with the king and return a spade, establishing dummy's king as declarer's tenth trick.

The principle that applies is simple enough. You don't necessarily assume that your opponent has all the values his bidding indicates he has. Things are not always what they seem.

Film Treasure Is Salted Away

Hutchinson, Kan. (UPI) — A fabulous treasury of famous Hollywood movies is literally "salted away" in a 650-foot-deep salt mine near here.

Mike Gingerich, 30, manager of Underground Vaults and Storage Co., says the priceless original prints of over 1,800 films are stored there.

"We can guarantee a constant atmosphere of 68 degrees and 50% humidity that preserves documents and films. And we could survive a direct hit from a nuclear bomb," Gingerich said.

Old Folks Appreciate Her Style

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

The elderly woman carefully placed a handful of groceries on the counter and waited patiently until those before her checked out.

The checker totaled the groceries, took the elderly woman's money and returned the change.

The woman, now satisfied, hoisted the small bag of groceries into her arms and departed.

Barely a word was uttered throughout the scenario.

"I know what they're looking for, that's all," said Dorothy Cain, head checker at Mr. B's downtown. Mrs Cain takes extra pains to make her regular customers, particularly the old folks, feel special.

"I just try to treat everybody like they're somebody," Mrs Cain explained. She's been doing that for 17 years now And all in the same downtown grocery store that has gone by three different names — Gold's, Brandeis, and now Mr. B. IGA.

"All kinds" shop at the store, Mrs. Cain said. They range from University students, to older people, young people on a shopping spree to businessmen and career women who drop in after work, even some folks from out of town

But the retired person is Mrs. Cain's most frequent customer

Through the year, the head checker has become acquainted with the senior citizens' routines.

"Some spend the day, every day, downtown," she said. They ride the bus for a dime on their blue tickets, a special provision for senior citizens.

Many have no money for shopping sprees. Their social security and pension checks barely cover their food and lights, she said So they take their time making their grocery purchases — and spread the shopping out over the week

"I'm probably the only contact they have other than their landlord," she said, proud that the old folks have found a friend in her.

"They know me and just want to say hello," she said, smiling pleasantly.

And she still goes out of her way to make them "feel like they're somebody." It's the little things that count, she said. Like "getting the specials right and telling them how much the fruit weighs, what it will cost.

"A lot of them appreciate that," Mrs. Cain said.

"I'm just doing my job," she insisted modestly.

And then she bounced off again to her post at the check-out stand.

The petite woman climbed on the riser at her cash register and was back again making new friends or chatting with the regulars — letting them know that someone cares.

Spray Cans More Costly Than Other Applicators

©The New York Times

New York — Aerosol cans are a convenience but they come to the consumer usually — but not always — at a higher cost, a research project of the New York Public Interest Research Group found.

Paul Chinchar, a Queens College student who coordinated the project, said that the researchers found that when costs per application were worked out under laboratory conditions, the arosol versions were consistently more expensive to use than products under the same brand name used as poured or sprayed liquids, roll-ons or creams.

For example, Arrid Extra Dry Anti-Perspirant Spray in the six ounce aerosol can at $1.42 was found to cost 2.5 cents an application. In the one ounce jar Arrid Anti-Perspirant Cream Deodorant at 89 cents was 1.6 cents an application. And in the 1.5 fluid ounce roll-on applicator at $1.24 the Arrid Anti-Perspirant Roll-on Deodorant was 0.7 cents an application.

Coppertone Suntain Oil was purchased in the two fluid ounce squeeze tube at $1.09, the four fluid ounce squeeze bottle at $1.99 and the six avoirdupois ounce aerosol can at $2.59. The cost per application was 2.6 cents for the tube, 2.8 cents for the bottle and 4.2 cents for the can, according to Christine Dwre, staff associate of the research group.

Bactine First Aid Spray was another example. In the two fluid ounce squeeze bottle it cost 2.2 cents an application; in the 4.5 avoirdupois ounce aerosol can the cost per application worked out at 4.7 cents.

In the case of Windex, the glass cleaner, the difference in cost per application between spray bottle and aerosol can was only one-tenth of a cent. But for Solarcaine Sun Burn Lotion there was a 4 cent difference between the cost per application of the lotion in a squeeze bottle and in the aerosol can. Significant differences also were found in paints, waxes and insecticides.

All manufacturers acknowledge that there is a difference in cost. The reason, they say, is that they are selling a branded product with a system for application. The application system is not only convenient but also more effective, Malcolm W. Jensen, president of the Can Manufacturers Institute, explained in an interview.

"This isn't so apparent with some products, but consider paint in an aerosol spray can," he said. "You can buy a brush, and paint thinner, and a brush cleaner, and a mixing bucket and get a good result. Or you can buy a spray can and get a result you can't get with the brush. But you have to pay for a stronger can, a valve, a propellant and a manufacturing process that eliminates thinning and cleaning.

"New products tend to be sold at more competitive prices. But when a product is established, its price reflects its cost."

Doormat Cleans Shoes Automatically

(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — Tired of lazy people ignoring your welcome mat and tracking dirt into your home or office?

A West German company has the solution: an electronic doormat that automatically cleans the shoes of people stepping on it

The mat is comprised of a series of brushes made of soft plastic, raised about 10 inches above a footboard. When someone steps on the board, the spring loaded brushes are lowered to floor level, where they rotate to clean the shoes.

"Soles and heel are safely supported on the footboard and cleaned," says the company's promotional material.

Some of the electronic doormat's advantages listed by the company are lower cleaning costs, floor coverings last longer and rooms are kept 'hygienic and aesthetic.'

Road Projects Get Board OK

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Despite misgivings that they might be firing up a runaway locomotive, the Lancaster County Board Tuesday approved agreements on eight roads projects.

The agreements pave the way for seeking 70% federal funding of the projects.

"Is this the critical point at which we are committing ourselves, and lose control of the project?" Commissioner Bruce Hamilton asked County Engineer Marvin Nuernberger.

After Nuernberger repeatedly assured the commissioners in a 100-minute session Tuesday morning, and again at the regular afternoon meeting, that they can still quash the projects, the board finally gave its approval.

Salt Creek Bridge

Nuernberger said the old two-lane bridge is the "most critical" in Lancaster County.

But commissioners were worried that their action Tuesday might be construed as approving a four-lane bridge in what is supposedly intended to be preserved as a wilderness area.

Nuernberger told the commissioners that he was not asking them to take that step, but did little to allay suspicions that he might ask them to do it in the future.

"In all comprehensive planning since 1960, Old Cheney has been designated as a possible four-lane roadway," Nuernberger said.

"I have every right to plan by those documents. That's what planning is all about."

Commissioner Jan Gauger responded, "A lot has changed since 1965."

Update Of Plan

Gauger and Hamilton drew attention to an update of the Comprehensive Plan now in progress, including a transportation section and the proposed West Lincoln Bypass.

"What if the engineers decide that Old Cheney should not connect with the West Bypass?" asked Gauger.

"Does Old Cheney have to be four-lane?" asked Hamilton.

Nuernberger again assured the commissioners that they will have input into the planning of the Old Cheney bridge, and that alternatives will be considered.

That project is the only one of the eight that has not been advertised to see if citizens want a public hearing, Nuernberger said. In all the others no citizens asked for a hearing, or none was required because the county already owns all the right-of-way, he said.

"People want the bridges bad enough that they are avoiding the public hearings," Nuernberger said. He said that in some cases a rural residents simply donated right-of-way needed in the road improvements.

Other Improvements

The other improvements are: grading east of Agnew, grading and a bridge replacement north of Sprague, a bridge replacement south of Hickman, a bridge on S. 56th over Beal Slough and grading, and a bridge replacement on Havelock Avenue.

In other action, the board accepted a high bid from the Journal-Star Printing Co. to publish the delinquent tax list.

The low bid was submitted by the Lincoln Sun, but the commissioners said the two daily Lincoln newspapers would reach more readers. Based on the size of last year's list the difference between the bids was about $125.

The board also approved a lease contract with the Gateway Shopping Center for $6,620 annually for the drivers licensing office, whilch will be moved from the crowded County-City Building.

Lincoln Woman Knocked Down By Car

An 80-year-old woman was listed in fair condition Tuesday at Lincoln General Hospital after she was knocked down by a car while crossing 13th St. Emma Gardner, of 1301 J, sustained head injuries when she fell after a car driven by James P. Null, 24, of 4500 Van Dorn, rolled into her, police said. Null was intending to make a right turn on a red light, police said. He was issued a citation for failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian. Null was northbound on 13th. Gardner was walking west across 13th (Star Photo)

Long Distance Cable Repaired

Long distance service to five Nebraska towns was disrupted for about three hours Tuesday evening while Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph workers repaired a buried cable that had been smashed in a construction accident, an LT&T spokseman said.

The spokesman said a construction crew was placing a conduit near 84th and Highway 2 and accidentally crushed the cable, cutting off long distance service to Tecumseh, Bennet, Palmyra, Adams and Panama.

Cable crews repaired the cable by shortly after 7:45 p.m., he said.

Retail Sales Declined In March

Lincoln's March 1975 retail sales declined about 8% from March, 1974 levels, according to a University of Nebraska-Lincoln Bureau of Business Research report.

Lincoln's sales in Lancaster County also were down, according to the report. Sales to date in 1975 are 92.7% of what they were at the same date last year.

But Nebraska cities other than Lincoln also are seeing sales slump. Of 29 major cities and towns surveyed by the bureau, only two, Grand Island and Holdrege, reported city sales above their March 1974 amounts.

Overall business activity was not strong in Nebraska in March, according to the bureau report. Total dollar volume in March was 101.2% of the volume reached in March 1974. Physical volume in March was 94.9% of what it had been in March 1974.

Agriculture fell short in both categories, its dollar volume 71.7% of what it had been in March 1974, its physical volume down about 20% from the same period.

Senator Spends Political Funds At His Casino

Carson City, Nev. (UPI) — Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., has collected $69,119 in political contributions so far this year, and part of that money has been spent at his hotel-casino here.

Records filed with the secretary of state's office show that Laxalt paid $11,143 to the Ormsby House here in April this year for "miscellaneous charges — room and office equipment." Laxalt owns 50% and his brother Peter holds the other 50% voting stock.

Laxalt, in reporting his political finances, showed that his former law firm of Laxalt, Berry & Allison contributed $25,000 in services. That was for their work in the recount election last year.

His major contributions came from $2,500 each from three executives of the Argent corporation, which owns the Stardust and Fremont hotels in Las Vegas. The three men were Frank Rosenthal, Herb Tobman and Allen Glick.

Hy-Gain Electronics Gets Support For Addition Plans

The Lancaster County Board Tuesday gave the firm a statement of "good faith" Tuesday, an initial step toward the issuing of industrial development bonds.

About 100 to 150 new employes will work in the addition, according to President Andrew Andros. The plant manufactures radios and antennas.

The firm showed a dramatic increase in sales and earnings for the fiscal year's third quarter. For the quarter ending May 31, 1974, Hy-Gain had net sales of $8,631,330, up 121% from $3,901,915 in the same period in 1974.

Net earnings were $682,988 in the 1974 period, compared with $157,453 in the 1974 quarter.

For the nine-month period ending May 31, 1975, the company had sales of more than $18 million, an 81% increase over the $10,265,312 for the nine-month period in 1974.

Earnings increased over the nine-month period from $165,705 in 1974 to more than $1 million in 1975.

Building Commission Cuts Operations Budget

The City-County Building Commission Tuesday took another whack at what they believe is a fatty operational budget for the County-City Building.

The commission cut another $50,000 for a total slice of $132,000. The budget it recommends for the coming year is now $949,843.

In making the motion for the deeper cut, Chairman Gene Cedardahl argued that it would present a challenge to the new administrator the commission plans to hire soon.

The commission is now considering two applicants from Lincoln, one of them a woman, and two applicatns from the Omaha area.

The new administrator will decide to cut the additional $50,000, under the commission's recommendation. The building budget must be approved by both the City Council and the County Board.

Some commission members argued that there is still more fat in the budget. Member Verne Traudt said he believes a good administrator can cut another $50,000.

County fiscal analyst Elmer Cheek disagreed with the new cut, basing his objections on the spending that apparently was necessary in past years.

Councilman F. Bob Sikyta indicated he does not believe all the spending was necessary. "We're not living in a hospital," he growled.

$1,200 Damage Inflicted On Car

Youths did about $1,200 worth of damage to a car Monday night by jumping up and down on its roof and hood and tearing off a rocker panel, according to police reports.

Police arrested a 16-year-old Monday evening and were seeking two other suspects. There were three types of shoe prints on the car, police said.

The incident occurred at the Snooker Bowl, 47th and Dudley. Police said the incident apparently followed an argument about a girl. The car is owned by Gary D. Jones, 17, of 1601 N. 24th.

Squirrel Family Welcomed Newcomers To Town

Opal Y. Palmer, the author of today's Write On story, is a free-lance writer who has had several children's articles published in various magazines.

By OPAL Y. PALMER

We had just moved to a new town and had made no friends. The Chatter Family were the first to introduce themselves.

This family of red squirrels became our most intimate neighbors. They borrowed without returning; they imposed upon our privacy without apology. Nevertheless, like most neighbors who have such qualities, they did it with pleasing and unassuming graciousness.

The first request Mrs. Chatter made was for breakfast. One morning I opened the kitchen door and there she sat. When she saw me she chattered a greeting.

I chattered back. She hopped onto the bottom step and visited some more. At my answering reply, she hopped onto the second step. With each additional chatter, her tail waved and twitched above her head.

Interpreting Mrs. Chatter's language to be a request for food, I put an English walnut on the top step. To my disappointment she scurried away without taking it.

After that, we conversed frequently. She often took the breakfast I offered after the door was closed. But usually, the family busied themselves with taking whatever they wanted of whatever we had without asking.

The first treasure that fell to their family larder was a tree full of black walnuts. For days, the family trailed each other among the limbs, pulling walnuts before they were mature enough to fall to the ground.

But one year the walnut tree was not so generous. Come spring, Mr. and Mrs. Chatter and all the Chatterettes were very hungry indeed.

The first things they borrowed were our tender, young lilac buds — all we had. Then, one day I was attracted by greening branches of a weeping willow tree outside an upstairs window doing a rapid, graceful, ballet dance on a windless day.

A bundle of red fur agitating at both ends had stopped on a large limb. When the fur unwound itself, our hungry neighbor thrust his head forward, gnawed off a tender branch, took it in his forepaws, sat on his haunches and gnawed the leaves from the branch as we would eat corn off the cob.

I researched the squirrel. Nowhere did I find that red squirrels are addicted to tender lilac buds and new leaves from weeping willow branches.

This was proof to me that God's little creatures are just as enterprising as any American family. Pioneer families, settling in the treeless west, built sod houses. They learned to eat wild fruits and roots of wild plants in order to survive. They learned new ways of living with that same God-given determination, ingenuity and inspiration which my chattering neighbors portrayed. They survived.

And our Chatter Family survived!

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	2 ♣	3 NT	Pass
4 ♥

Opening lead - king of clubs.

Consider this deal where South got to four hearts on the bidding shown and West led the king of clubs.

Declarer won with the ace and played the ace and another diamond, hoping to ruff two diamonds in dummy. But East won the second diamond with the queen and returned a trump.

Declarer went up with the ace, ruffed the seven of diamonds in dummy, returned to his hand by ruffing a club, and drew East's remaining two trumps, producing this position:

North

♣Q J	♦K

South

If South now had led a spade to the king — on the basis that West, who had bid two clubs, had the ace — he would have gone down one.

But declarer saw no reason to take an unnecessary risk in this position. So, as a precautionary measure — in case East had the ace of spades instead of West — South exited with the eight of diamonds.

This play proved to be eminently successful when East was forced to win the diamond with the king and return a spade, establishing dummy's king as declarer's tenth trick.

The principle that applies is simple enough. You don't necessarily assume that your opponent has all the values his bidding indicates he has. Things are not always what they seem.

Film Treasure Is Salted Away

Hutchinson, Kan. (UPI) — A fabulous treasury of famous Hollywood movies is literally "salted away" in a 650-foot-deep salt mine near here.

Mike Gingerich, 30, manager of Underground Vaults and Storage Co., says the priceless original prints of over 1,800 films are stored there.

"We can guarantee a constant atmosphere of 68 degrees and 50% humidity that preserves documents and films. And we could survive a direct hit from a nuclear bomb," Gingerich said.

Fairgrounds Debut Pleasing To Frazee

THE LINCOLN STAR

Sports

Wednesday, July 16, 1975 23

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

"This is the first year I've raced here and I kind of like it if the weather holds out," he said after training High Rover to the feature race victory Tuesday as the State Fairgrounds opened its 26-day horse race meeting.

"I'm going to Louisiana Downs after this meet and I didn't want to get too far away, so I decided to come to Lincoln," said the Eads, Colo., trainer who conditions High Rover for Mrs. W.F. Frazee.

The 10-year-old gelding received a fine ride from Wayne Anderson, who decided to set a slower-than-normal pace for the mile and 70-yard event that attracted only five horses.

"I didn't really want to set the pace so I slowed it way down," Anderson said. "I was ahead for much of the race, but then I took him back a little down the backstretch. I really wasn't worried about where I was running."

High Rover was either on the pace or second throughout most of the chase. When Larrijo took a two-length lead entering the stretch, Anderson and High Rover went to work.

High Rover claimed a one-half length victory over Larrijo as the 3-1 favorite. The Kemling Bros., Inc's Patsy's Reign finished third.

Anderson, meanwhile, continued his hot riding efforts. He won 20 races to place seventh in the rider standings at the recently-completed Ak-Sar-Ben meet in Omaha. Those were his best ever totals in Omaha.

"I just hope I can continue riding well here in Lincoln," said the popular rider. "I've talked with Mr. Frazee and I told him I'd like to ride some for him. But that's up to him."

The triumph, accomplished in 1:44 4-5, was the first win in seven outings this year for High Rover. He earned $1,560 from the $2,600 purse.

He paid $6.20, $4.80 and $2.40. Larrijo, ridden by Bill Stallings, placed for $4.80 and $2.40 and Patsy's Reign showed for $2.20.

The real riding standout was Terry Barnes, who returned to the races after a two-year layoff. He steered three winners in four mounts.

His winners included Lou Ann Persinger's Tsuluk ($22.20) in the first, F.G. Psota and C.A. Leuders' I Guarantee Ya ($3.40) in the third and the Poor Boy Stables' Terra Lad ($2.60) in the eighth.

Following a stewards' inquiry into the fifth race, the three-man stewards' board disqualified Jack Lewis, et al's Luci's Titan from second to third and advanced Bart Ford's Windswept Shore from third to second.

Despite the mid-90 degree temperatures, the attendance and mutuel handle established opening-day standards.

Only Two Exactas

Despite published reports to the contrary, the State Fairgrounds only offers two exactas — on the fifth race and the last race each day.

Fonner Park in Grand Island and Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha had three exactas this season.

Early DD Record

John Skold, superintendent of mutuels, said if the record pace continues Wednesday, a third seller might be added for the early daily double.

Aunt Priscilla Picks Winner

I knew Tuesday would be my lucky day.

When I walked in the State Fairgrounds and saw my pretty ponies on those new color television sets, I felt lucky.

And wouldn't you know it. That cute little Dave King gave my Don't Tiger such a beautiful ride in the fourth race that I wasn't even upset that my Whirl A Chip had a little trouble in the ninth race.

Aunt Priscilla Wins $18.60

The $22.60 payoff on Don't Tiger boosted my $104 spree fund to $122.60 this season.

On Wednesday, I'm going to put my $2 win tickets in on Dr. Longo's Pet in the fourth race and on Peter Graff in the sixth race.

Madlock's Single Lifts NL To Win

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — The sight of Henry Kissinger wearing a Milwaukee Brewers' cap, Charlie Finley delivering a pregame pep-talk or Carl Yastrzemski belting a three-run homer failed to deter the National League Tuesday night from its usual domination of the All-Star Game.

Thanks to Bill Madlock's two-run single in the ninth inning, the National League whipped the American League 6-3 for its fourth straight victory in baseball's annual showcase of talent.

Although Finley, the green-coated Oakland A's owner and Secretary-of-State Kissinger were obviously thrilled by Yastrzemski's three-run sixth inning homer that tied the game at 3-3, it was Madlock, the NL's leading hitter and the only Chicago Cub on the squad, who set the tone for the ultimate American League defeat—their 12th in the last 13 All-Star Games.

"The guys in the American League just seem to be waiting out there to get beat and that's what happened," said Madlock, who accomplished the feat by snapping the 3-3 tie with a two-run single during a wild three-run ninth inning rally.

Held in check for two innings by Jim "Catfish" Hunter, the NL started the New York Yankees' "Three Million Dollar Man" on the way to his second All-Star defeat when Reggie Smith blooped a leadoff single to left that hit off the glove of left-fielder Claudell Washington. Al Oliver, pinch-hitting for winning pitcher Jon Matlack, doubled into the leftfield corner with Smith stopping at third and reliever Rich Gossage set the stage for Madlock by hitting Larry Bowa to load the bases.

Madlock then stroked a single down the third base line, scoring Smith and Oliver, and a third run nearly came home when Gossage, trying to peg out Bowa at third, hit third base coach Red Schoendienst in the back. Bowa held third on the play but came home a moment later on a sacrifice fly by Pete Rose.

"I don't hit too many right down the line like that," said Madlock, explaining why AL third baseman Graig Nettles was out of position to make the play. "I'm really more of a spray hitter than a pull-hitter."

Jon Matlack, who hurled the seventh and eighth innings and struck out four, was credited with the victory and shared the game's most valuable player honors with Madlock. Matlack, however, gave all the credit to Madlock for the triumph.

"Give the trophy to Madlock," said Matlack. "Without him we don't win it."

The National League, which now leads in the series 27-18, set the game's early tone with the power that had made it the 8-5 favorite.

Garvey, the MVP of the game a year ago in Pittsburgh, stroked a 1-0 Blue pitch into the leftfield bleachers and Wynn followed three pitches later with a similar shot 10 or 12 rows further back. It marked the first time that back-to-back homers had been hit in All-Star competition since 1956 when Ted Williams and Mickey Mantle of the AL accomplished the feat.

The National League made it 3-0 in the third off Steve Busby when Lou Brock singled and went to second on a balk by the Kansas City Royals' right-hander. Brock stole third, but it proved unnecessary when Johnny Bench singled sharply just inside the third base line to score the fleet Cardinal outfielder.

By then it looked like it might be a runaway as seven of the original NL starters had already gotten base hits. But, after Jerry Reuss and Don Sutton had blanked the AL over the first five innings, the Americans came to life against Matlack's teammate, Tom Seaver, in the sixth. Joe Rudi led off with a single and pinchrunner Washington promptly stole second. After a walk to Gene Tenace, Yastrzemski, batting for pitcher Jim Kaat, drove Seaver's first pitch deep into the right-field bullpen to tie the score.

Kissinger, who threw out the first ball, was given a Brewers' cap by the hometown ballclub and wore it throughout the game while surrounded by security men in a special box alongside the American League dugout. After throwing out the first ball, the Secretary-of-State, an oldtime Yankee fan, cheered enthusiastically for Yastrzemski's homer and the appearance of the Brewers' 41-year-old home run king, Hank Aaron, who ended a third inning AL threat by lining out to short.

A record County Stadium crowd of 51,480 attended the 46th annual game between the two leagues.

Atlanta (AP) — The Atlanta Hawks revealed Tuesday they had proposed trading No. 1 draft choice David Thompson to the New York Knicks in an effort to keep the three-time All-American in the National Basketball Association.

A's Learn Things About Themselves

Milwaukee (AP) — The World champion Oakland A's learned a few things about themselves Tuesday night in baseball's 46th All-Star Game.

"Nobody's perfect," said the A's Gene Tenace, who committed a ninth-inning error which aided the National Lague's winning three-run rally. "We sure ain't trying to make those mistakes."

The A's 20-year-old leftfielder Claudell Washington also experienced some difficulty in his first All-Star appearance.

"I'm still gald I came," said Washington, who was picked off first base by the Mets' John Matlack in the seventh inning and also dropped a sinking liner by Reggie Smith in the eighth and appeared to misplay pinch-hitter Al Oliver's double.

"Smith's hit just went off my glove," he said.

The A's other players, who don't seem to make many mistakes in post-season play, also stumbled through the game.

Reggie Jackson was hitless, starter pitcher Vida Blue's stuff was very hittable, veteran shortstop Bert Campanerris said he was embarrassed and last year's top A's pitcher, Catfish Hunter, was charged with the loss.

"I just wasn't really up for the game," said Blue, who is now 1-0 in All-Star competition. "I really wanted to be up, but I just didn't have it."

"Bench is the only catcher that could have gotten me," said the speedy shortstop. "It's just one of those things that happens. I thought I was being careful."

"That's just part of the game said Oakland skipper Alvin Dark who managed the AL All-Stars. "We don't get picked off often."

Five Young Gal Golfers Remain In Contention

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Omaha — Five golfers 20 years old and younger still remain in contention for the Nebraska Women's Amateur Golf Association's championship after the first round of match play Tuesday at the Omaha Field Club.

Their bid to make 1975 the year of the "whiz kids," however, is being challenged by a pair of crafty veterans from Lincoln.

Defending champion Jean Hyland and Dorothy Schwartzkopf, whose combined ages nearly equal the total of the other survivors, posted constrasting victories Tuesday and will meet teenagers in the second round Wednesday.

Hyland defeated 17-year-old Sharon Slattery, the future University of Nebraska golfer, but had to come from behind to win 2 and 1.

Schwartzkopf, on the other hand, ousted medalist Betty Marchese, 4 and 3, and led most of the way.

Hyland's next match will be against another 17-year-old Omahan, Theresa Wanek, who scored a 4 and 2 decision over Bobbie Hopp of Hastings.

Schwartzkopf will play Laurie Glass of Beatrice, a 19-year-old sophomore at Doane College. Glass defeated Joan Martig of Omaha, 5 and 4, in the first round.

Hyland, five times champion of state women's golf, had nothing but praise for Slattery. "She hit beautifully," Hyland said. "There's nothing weak about her game. She hits a long ball and hits it with control. She just needs experience."

Hyland lost the eighth and ninth holes and was two down at the turn. She blamed slow play which caused her to lose the tempo of her game, but she bounced back to win 10, 11 and 12. Then, after losing the 13th with a double bogey and halving 14, she won the next two holes and halved the 17th to close out the match.

Marchese, who won the medal Monday with a 76, ran into tree trouble off the tee and her putts weren't dropping as she fell behind Schwartskopf by three holes at the turn and never recovered.

Anne Mariucci, 18, a University of Arizona golfer, had to come from three down at the turn to eliminate Debbie Sandstedt of Omaha, 2 and 1.

"I just hit the ball terrible and was getting shook up," Mariucci said. "But I learned a lesson — you CAN come back. I started playing the course instead of waiting for her (Sandstedt) to make a mistake."

Her second-round foe will be Charon Gaffney, whose home course is the Field Club. Gaffney used a putter from the fringe on the final hole to get the ball in the cup from 40 feet away and end the match, 2 up, over Debbie Marchese of Omaha.

Lynne Merwald of Omaha, an Arizona State golfer who started in college at Nebraska, defeated Julie Hall of Norfolk, 3 and 2, and will face 15-year-old Elizabeth Weekes, South Sioux City high school sophomore-to-be, in the second round.

Merwald, one up at the turn, won four of the next five holes from Hall while Weekes led by four holes after nine and coasted home over Lincoln's Betty Abel, 4 and 3.

Road Projects Get Board OK

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Despite misgivings that they might be firing up a runaway locomotive, the Lancaster County Board Tuesday approved agreements on eight roads projects.

The agreements pave the way for seeking 70% federal funding of the projects.

"Is this the critical point at which we are committing ourselves, and lose control of the project?" Commissioner Bruce Hamilton asked County Engineer Marvin Nuernberger.

After Nuernberger repeatedly assured the commissioners in a 100-minute session Tuesday morning, and again at the regular afternoon meeting, that they can still quash the projects, the board finally gave its approval.

Salt Creek Bridge

Nuernberger said the old two-lane bridge is the "most critical" in Lancaster County.

But commissioners were worried that their action Tuesday might be construed as approving a four-lane bridge in what is supposedly intended to be preserved as a wilderness area.

Nuernberger told the commissioners that he was not asking them to take that step, but did little to allay suspicions that he might ask them to do it in the future.

"In all comprehensive planning since 1960, Old Cheney has been designated as a possible four-lane roadway," Nuernberger said.

"I have every right to plan by those documents. That's what planning is all about."

Commissioner Jan Gauger responded, "A lot has changed since 1965."

Update Of Plan

Gauger and Hamilton drew attention to an update of the Comprehensive Plan now in progress, including a transportation section and the proposed West Lincoln Bypass.

"What if the engineers decide that Old Cheney should not connect with the West Bypass?" asked Gauger.

"Does Old Cheney have to be four-lane?" asked Hamilton.

Nuernberger again assured the commissioners that they will have input into the planning of the Old Cheney bridge, and that alternatives will be considered.

That project is the only one of the eight that has not been advertised to see if citizens want a public hearing, Nuernberger said. In all the others no citizens asked for a hearing, or none was required because the county already owns all the right-of-way, he said.

"People want the bridges bad enough that they are avoiding the public hearings," Nuernberger said. He said that in some cases a rural residents simply donated right-of-way needed in the road improvements.

Other Improvements

The other improvements are: grading east of Agnew, grading and a bridge replacement north of Sprague, a bridge replacement south of Hickman, a bridge on S. 56th over Beal Slough and grading, and a bridge replacement on Havelock Avenue.

In other action, the board accepted a high bid from the Journal-Star Printing Co. to publish the delinquent tax list.

The low bid was submitted by the Lincoln Sun, but the commissioners said the two daily Lincoln newspapers would reach more readers. Based on the size of last year's list the difference between the bids was about $125.

The board also approved a lease contract with the Gateway Shopping Center for $6,620 annually for the drivers licensing office, whilch will be moved from the crowded County-City Building.

Lincoln Woman Knocked Down By Car

An 80-year-old woman was listed in fair condition Tuesday at Lincoln General Hospital after she was knocked down by a car while crossing 13th St. Emma Gardner, of 1301 J, sustained head injuries when she fell after a car driven by James P. Null, 24, of 4500 Van Dorn, rolled into her, police said. Null was intending to make a right turn on a red light, police said. He was issued a citation for failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian. Null was northbound on 13th. Gardner was walking west across 13th (Star Photo)

Long Distance Cable Repaired

Long distance service to five Nebraska towns was disrupted for about three hours Tuesday evening while Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph workers repaired a buried cable that had been smashed in a construction accident, an LT&T spokseman said.

The spokesman said a construction crew was placing a conduit near 84th and Highway 2 and accidentally crushed the cable, cutting off long distance service to Tecumseh, Bennet, Palmyra, Adams and Panama.

Cable crews repaired the cable by shortly after 7:45 p.m., he said.

Retail Sales Declined In March

Lincoln's March 1975 retail sales declined about 8% from March, 1974 levels, according to a University of Nebraska-Lincoln Bureau of Business Research report.

Lincoln's sales in Lancaster County also were down, according to the report. Sales to date in 1975 are 92.7% of what they were at the same date last year.

But Nebraska cities other than Lincoln also are seeing sales slump. Of 29 major cities and towns surveyed by the bureau, only two, Grand Island and Holdrege, reported city sales above their March 1974 amounts.

Overall business activity was not strong in Nebraska in March, according to the bureau report. Total dollar volume in March was 101.2% of the volume reached in March 1974. Physical volume in March was 94.9% of what it had been in March 1974.

Agriculture fell short in both categories, its dollar volume 71.7% of what it had been in March 1974, its physical volume down about 20% from the same period.

Senator Spends Political Funds At His Casino

Carson City, Nev. (UPI) — Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., has collected $69,119 in political contributions so far this year, and part of that money has been spent at his hotel-casino here.

Records filed with the secretary of state's office show that Laxalt paid $11,143 to the Ormsby House here in April this year for "miscellaneous charges — room and office equipment." Laxalt owns 50% and his brother Peter holds the other 50% voting stock.

Laxalt, in reporting his political finances, showed that his former law firm of Laxalt, Berry & Allison contributed $25,000 in services. That was for their work in the recount election last year.

His major contributions came from $2,500 each from three executives of the Argent corporation, which owns the Stardust and Fremont hotels in Las Vegas. The three men were Frank Rosenthal, Herb Tobman and Allen Glick.

Hy-Gain Electronics Gets Support For Addition Plans

The Lancaster County Board Tuesday gave the firm a statement of "good faith" Tuesday, an initial step toward the issuing of industrial development bonds.

About 100 to 150 new employes will work in the addition, according to President Andrew Andros. The plant manufactures radios and antennas.

The firm showed a dramatic increase in sales and earnings for the fiscal year's third quarter. For the quarter ending May 31, 1974, Hy-Gain had net sales of $8,631,330, up 121% from $3,901,915 in the same period in 1974.

Net earnings were $682,988 in the 1974 period, compared with $157,453 in the 1974 quarter.

For the nine-month period ending May 31, 1975, the company had sales of more than $18 million, an 81% increase over the $10,265,312 for the nine-month period in 1974.

Earnings increased over the nine-month period from $165,705 in 1974 to more than $1 million in 1975.

Building Commission Cuts Operations Budget

The City-County Building Commission Tuesday took another whack at what they believe is a fatty operational budget for the County-City Building.

The commission cut another $50,000 for a total slice of $132,000. The budget it recommends for the coming year is now $949,843.

In making the motion for the deeper cut, Chairman Gene Cedardahl argued that it would present a challenge to the new administrator the commission plans to hire soon.

The commission is now considering two applicants from Lincoln, one of them a woman, and two applicatns from the Omaha area.

The new administrator will decide to cut the additional $50,000, under the commission's recommendation. The building budget must be approved by both the City Council and the County Board.

Some commission members argued that there is still more fat in the budget. Member Verne Traudt said he believes a good administrator can cut another $50,000.

County fiscal analyst Elmer Cheek disagreed with the new cut, basing his objections on the spending that apparently was necessary in past years.

Councilman F. Bob Sikyta indicated he does not believe all the spending was necessary. "We're not living in a hospital," he growled.

Youths did about $1,200 worth of damage to a car Monday night by jumping up and down on its roof and hood and tearing off a rocker panel, according to police reports.

Police arrested a 16-year-old Monday evening and were seeking two other suspects. There were three types of shoe prints on the car, police said.

The incident occurred at the Snooker Bowl, 47th and Dudley. Police said the incident apparently followed an argument about a girl. The car is owned by Gary D. Jones, 17, of 1601 N. 24th.

Sound-Alikes Share Honor

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jon Matlack couldn't believe he would win or share the All-Star Game's Most Valuable Player award. He was sure it would go to his sound-alike, Bill Madlock.

"When they called the name right after the game, I thought sure Bill had won," said Matlack, the New York Mets' lefthander who was the winning pitcher in the National League's 6-3 victory over the Americans Tuesday night.

"But then I looked at Bill and I saw him looking at me," Matlack continued. "Then I realized maybe it was me. Then some guy grabbed both of us and told us we had both won. Fantastic! I was awestruck."

Matlack, firing what batterymate Johnny Bench of Cincinnati called "an exceptional fastball—faster than usual"—allowed two hits and struck out four while pitching the seventh and eighth innings.

Madlock, whose .353 batting average for the Chicago Cubs leads the NL, broke a 3-3 tie with a bases-loaded two-run single in the ninth inning.

Matlack was warming up in the sixth when a ball suddenly bounced a few feet away from him in the right-center field bullpen. It was a three-run homer hit by Carl Yastrzemski that pulled the AL into the 3-3 tie.

"I had kind of a sinking feeling," Matlack said. "It was getting late in the game and I'm sure it gave them a lift. But I really think the National League has more talent. I thought we could come back and I was determined to hold them.

"I threw mostly exploding fastballs, really lively," he said. "In that situation I was trying to put my best foot forward. That meant fastballs.

"I wasn't going to get beat by some slipshod curve. I was going to go with my winning pitch and make them prove they could hit it."

Matlack completed his two innings by firing a bullet past Boston rookie Fred Lynn, one of baseball's hottest hitters, in the eighth inning with the tie-breaking run on third base.

"Jim Palmer of Baltimore had been talking about him like he was kind of a Greek god, an unbelievable hitter with cork on his bat or something," Matlack said. "But I decided to keep throwing fastballs, move them around. I got him on the inside corner, knee high."

Madlock's decisive hit was a hard grounder, about two feet inside the third base bag and just off the glove of New York Yankee third baseman Graig Nettles.

"Nettles had to play off the line on me because I spray the ball around," Madlock said. "I hit a changeup on the inside. Catfish Hunter had thrown me two balls away and I was looking for something off-speed."

Hunter, the Yankees' ace, wasn't his usual tantalizing self. And Steve Garvey of the Los Angeles Dodgers said AL starting pitcher Vida Blue didn't have his customary overpowering fastball.

Garvey and teammate Jimmy Wynn staked the Nationals to a 2-0 lead with successive homers leading off the second against Blue, who was tagged for five hits in two innings.

"I definitely have seen Blue faster," said Garvey, the MVP in last year's All-Star game. "He had thrown Bench breaking pitches the previous inning and I thought he would try to get his fastball back a little. I hit a fastball."

It also was a rocky night for the New York Mets' 13-game winner, two-time Cy Young Award winner Tom Seaver. He was the victim of Yastrzemski's homer.

"Tom was throwing well," Bench said. "I called for a Tom Seaver fastball, which is more than your ordinary fastball, and I just didn't get it.

"But I told Tom not to worry," Bench added. "I told him at least he made the game interesting."

Frogs Spared From Firearms

Nebraska's bullfrog season is under way, but the popular old-time method of sniping the croakers with a small-caliber firearm is no longer allowed, reminds the Game and Parks Commission.

Legal methods for taking frogs include hook-and-line, gigging, dipnetting, or scrambling after them with bare hands. Bow and arrows may also be used on frogs, except on state parks and recreation areas.

Nebraskans 16 and older and nonresidents must have a fishing permit to go after bullfrogs. Bag and possession limits is eight.

Alston Extends All-Star Mark

Milwaukee (AP) — The National League's 6-3 All-Star game victory Tuesday night enabled Walter Alston of Los Angeles to extend his own record for managing the most winning All-Star teams.

The victory was Alston's seventh as NL manager. He previously had won games in 1956, two in 1960, 1964, 1966 and 1967.

Oakland pitcher Vida Blue tied a negative mark when he allowed two home runs in one inning. Dodger teammates Steve Garvey and Jimmy Wynn connected for consecutive homers in the second inning.

Kansas City's Steve Busby tied the record for the most balks in an inning or a game when he committed one in the third inning.

Carl Yastrzemski of Boston became the 12th player to hit a pinch homer in All-Star competition.

Three players, Araon, Bobby Bonds of the New York Yankees and Bobby Murcer of San Francisco — tied another mark by participating in All-Star competition for each league.

ARJAY Advertising's bid for a doubleheader sweep in AAA slow pitch action Monday night was foiled as Colonel Sanders won an extra-inning, 10-9 contest.

John Burkman's clutch eighth inning hit handed Colonel Sanders the win after ARJAY had defeated Barry's 6-2, behind the four hit pitching of Sam Martin.

Barry's opened the night's action with a narrow, 7-6 win over Olympia, as winning pitcher Dennis Johnson stroked a game-winning single in the final inning.

Fairgrounds Debut Pleasing To Frazee

THE LINCOLN STAR
Sports
Wednesday, July 16, 1975 23

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Larry Frazee's decision to start racing in Lincoln looks better all the time.

"This is the first year I've raced here and I kind of like it if the weather holds out," he said after training High Rover to the feature race victory Tuesday as the State Fairgrounds opened its 26-day horse race meeting.

"I'm going to Louisiana Downs after this meet and I didn't want to get too far away, so I decided to come to Lincoln," said the Eads, Colo., trainer who conditions High Rover for Mrs. W.F. Frazee.

The 10-year-old gelding received a fine ride from Wayne Anderson, who decided to set a slower-than-normal pace for the mile and 70-yard event that attracted only five horses.

"I didn't really want to set the pace so I slowed it way down," Anderson said. "I was ahead for much of the race, but then I took him back a little down the backstretch. I really wasn't worried about where I was running."

High Rover was either on the pace or second throughout most of the chase. When Larrijo took a two-length lead entering the stretch, Anderson and High Rover went to work.

High Rover claimed a one-half length victory over Larrijo as the 3-1 favorite. The Kemling Bros., Inc's Patsy's Reign finished third.

Anderson, meanwhile, continued his hot riding efforts. He won 20 races to place seventh in the rider standings at the recently-completed Ak-Sar-Ben meet in Omaha. Those were his best ever totals in Omaha.

"I just hope I can continue riding well here in Lincoln," said the popular rider. "I've talked with Mr. Frazee and I told him I'd like to ride some for him. But that's up to him."

The triumph, accomplished in 1:44 4-5, was the first win in seven outings this year for High Rover. He earned $1,560 from the $2,600 purse.

He paid $6.20, $4.80 and $2.40. Larrijo, ridden by Bill Stallings, placed for $4.80 and $2.40 and Patsy's Reign showed for $2.20.

The real riding standout was Terry Barnes, who returned to the races after a two-year layoff. He steered three winners in four mounts.

His winners included Lou Ann Persinger's Tsuluk ($22.20) in the first, F.G. Psota and C.A. Leuders' I Guarantee Ya ($3.40) in the third and the Poor Boy Stables' Terra Lad ($2.60) in the eighth.

Following a stewards' inquiry into the fifth race, the three-man stewards' board disqualified Jack Lewis, et al's Luci's Titan from second to third and advanced Bart Ford's Windswept Shore from third to second.

Despite the mid-90 degree temperatures, the attendance and mutuel handle established opening-day standards.

Only Two Exactas

Despite published reports to the contrary, the State Fairgrounds only offers two exactas — on the fifth race and the last race each day.

Fonner Park in Grand Island and Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha had three exactas this season.

Early DD Record

John Skold, superintendent of mutuels, said if the record pace continues Wednesday, a third seller might be added for the early daily double.

Aunt Priscilla Picks Winner

I knew Tuesday would be my lucky day.

When I walked in the State Fairgrounds and saw my pretty ponies on those new color television sets, I felt lucky.

And wouldn't you know it. That cute little Dave King gave my Don't Tiger such a beautiful ride in the fourth race that I wasn't even upset that my Whirl A Chip had a little trouble in the ninth race.

Aunt Priscilla Wins $18.60

The $22.60 payoff on Don't Tiger boosted my $104 spree fund to $122.60 this season.

On Wednesday, I'm going to put my $2 win tickets in on Dr. Longo's Pet in the fourth race and on Peter Graff in the sixth race.

Madlock's Single Lifts NL To Win

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — The sight of Henry Kissinger wearing a Milwaukee Brewers' cap, Charlie Finley delivering a pregame pep-talk or Carl Yastrzemski belting a three-run homer failed to deter the National League Tuesday night from its usual domination of the All-Star Game.

Thanks to Bill Madlock's two-run single in the ninth inning, the National League whipped the American League 6-3 for its fourth straight victory in baseball's annual showcase of talent.

Although Finley, the green-coated Oakland A's owner and Secretary-of-State Kissinger were obviously thrilled by Yastrzemski's three-run sixth inning homer that tied the game at 3-3, it was Madlock, the NL's leading hitter and the only Chicago Cub on the squad, who set the tone for the ultimate American League defeat—their 12th in the last 13 All-Star Games.

"The guys in the American League just seem to be waiting out there to get beat and that's what happened," said Madlock, who accomplished the feat by snapping the 3-3 tie with a two-run single during a wild three-run ninth inning rally.

Held in check for two innings by Jim "Catfish" Hunter, the NL started the New York Yankees' "Three Million Dollar Man" on the way to his second All-Star defeat when Reggie Smith blooped a leadoff single to left that hit off the glove of left-fielder Claudell Washington. Al Oliver, pinch-hitting for winning pitcher Jon Matlack, doubled into the leftfield corner with Smith stopping at third and reliever Rich Gossage set the stage for Madlock by hitting Larry Bowa to load the bases.

Madlock then stroked a single down the third base line, scoring Smith and Oliver, and a third run nearly came home when Gossage, trying to peg out Bowa at third, hit third base coach Red Schoendienst in the back. Bowa held third on the play but came home a moment later on a sacrifice fly by Pete Rose.

"I don't hit too many right down the line like that," said Madlock, explaining why AL third baseman Graig Nettles was out of position to make the play. "I'm really more of a spray hitter than a pull-hitter."

Jon Matlack, who hurled the seventh and eighth innings and struck out four, was credited with the victory and shared the game's most valuable player honors with Madlock. Matlack, however, gave all the credit to Madlock for the triumph.

"Give the trophy to Madlock," said Matlack. "Without him we don't win it."

The National League, which now leads in the series 27-18, set the game's early tone with the power that had made it the 8-5 favorite.

Garvey, the MVP of the game a year ago in Pittsburgh, stroked a 1-0 Blue pitch into the leftfield bleachers and Wynn followed three pitches later with a similar shot 10 or 12 rows further back. It marked the first time that back-to-back homers had been hit in All-Star competition since 1956 when Ted Williams and Mickey Mantle of the AL accomplished the feat.

The National League made it 3-0 in the third off Steve Busby when Lou Brock singled and went to second on a balk by the Kansas City Royals' right-hander. Brock stole third, but it proved unnecessary when Johnny Bench singled sharply just inside the third base line to score the fleet Cardinal outfielder.

By then it looked like it might be a runaway as seven of the original NL starters had already gotten base hits. But, after Jerry Reuss and Don Sutton had blanked the AL over the first five innings, the Americans came to life against Matlack's teammate, Tom Seaver, in the sixth. Joe Rudi led off with a single and pinchrunner Washington promptly stole second. After a walk to Gene Tenace, Yastrzemski, batting for pitcher Jim Kaat, drove Seaver's first pitch deep into the right-field bullpen to tie the score.

Kissinger, who threw out the first ball, was given a Brewers' cap by the hometown ballclub and wore it throughout the game while surrounded by security men in a special box alongside the American League dugout. After throwing out the first ball, the Secretary-of-State, an oldtime Yankee fan, cheered enthusiastically for Yastrzemski's homer and the appearance of the Brewers' 41-year-old home run king, Hank Aaron, who ended a third inning AL threat by lining out to short.

A record County Stadium crowd of 51,480 attended the 46th annual game between the two leagues.

Proposed Trade Fails

Atlanta (AP) — The Atlanta Hawks revealed Tuesday they had proposed trading No. 1 draft choice David Thompson to the New York Knicks in an effort to keep the three-time All-American in the National Basketball Association.

A's Learn Things About Themselves

"Nobody's perfect," said the A's Gene Tenace, who committed a ninth-inning error which aided the National Lague's winning three-run rally. "We sure ain't trying to make those mistakes."

The A's 20-year-old leftfielder Claudell Washington also experienced some difficulty in his first All-Star appearance.

"I'm still gald I came," said Washington, who was picked off first base by the Mets' John Matlack in the seventh inning and also dropped a sinking liner by Reggie Smith in the eighth and appeared to misplay pinch-hitter Al Oliver's double.

"Smith's hit just went off my glove," he said.

The A's other players, who don't seem to make many mistakes in post-season play, also stumbled through the game.

Reggie Jackson was hitless, starter pitcher Vida Blue's stuff was very hittable, veteran shortstop Bert Campmeris said he was embarrassed and last year's top A's pitcher, Catfish Hunter, was charged with the loss.

"I just wasn't really up for the game," said Blue, who is now 1-0 in All-Star competition. "I really wanted to be up, but I just didn't have it."

"Bench is the only catcher that could have gotten me," said the speedy shortstop. "It's just one of those things that happens. I thought I was being careful."

"That's just part of the game said Oakland skipper Alvin Dark who managed the AL All-Stars. "We don't get picked off often."

Five Young Gal Golfers Remain In Contention

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Omaha — Five golfers 20 years old and younger still remain in contention for the Nebraska Women's Amateur Golf Association's championship after the first round of match play Tuesday at the Omaha Field Club.

Their bid to make 1975 the year of the "whiz kids," however, is being challenged by a pair of crafty veterans from Lincoln.

Defending champion Jean Hyland and Dorothy Schwartzkopf, whose combined ages nearly equal the total of the other survivors, posted constrasting victories Tuesday and will meet teenagers in the second round Wednesday.

Hyland defeated 17-year-old Sharon Slattery, the future University of Nebraska golfer, but had to come from behind to win 2 and 1.

Schwartzkopf, on the other hand, ousted medalist Betty Marchese, 4 and 3, and led most of the way.

Hyland's next match will be against another 17-year-old Omahan, Theresa Wanek, who scored a 4 and 2 decision over Bobbie Hopp of Hastings.

Schwartzkopf will play Laurie Glass of Beatrice, a 19-year-old sophomore at Doane College. Glass defeated Joan Martig of Omaha, 5 and 4, in the first round.

Hyland, five times champion of state women's golf, had nothing but praise for Slattery. "She hit beautifully," Hyland said. "There's nothing weak about her game. She hits a long ball and hits it with control. She just needs experience."

Hyland lost the eighth and ninth holes and was two down at the turn. She blamed slow play which caused her to lose the tempo of her game, but she bounced back to win 10, 11 and 12. Then, after losing the 13th with a double bogey and halving 14, she won the next two holes and halved the 17th to close out the match.

Marchese, who won the medal Monday with a 76, ran into tree trouble off the tee and her putts weren't dropping as she fell behind Schwartskopf by three holes at the turn and never recovered.

Anne Mariucci, 18, a University of Arizona golfer, had to come from three down at the turn to eliminate Debbie Sandstedt of Omaha, 2 and 1.

"I just hit the ball terrible and was getting shook up," Mariucci said. "But I learned a lesson — you CAN come back. I started playing the course instead of waiting for her (Sandstedt) to make a mistake."

Her second-round foe will be Charon Gaffney, whose home course is the Field Club. Gaffney used a putter from the fringe on the final hole to get the ball in the cup from 40 feet away and end the match, 2 up, over Debbie Marchese of Omaha.

Lynne Merwald of Omaha, an Arizona State golfer who started in college at Nebraska, defeated Julie Hall of Norfolk, 3 and 2, and will face 15-year-old Elizabeth Weekes, South Sioux City high school sophomore-to-be, in the second round.

Merwald, one up at the turn, won four of the next five holes from Hall while Weekes led by four holes after nine and coasted home over Lincoln's Betty Abel, 4 and 3.

Causes Of Urban Decay In State May Be Studied

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature's Urban Affairs Committee Tuesday discussed the possibility of employing research consultants to probe the causes of urban decay in Nebraska.

Under discussion was a plan to use the Center for Applied Urban Research at the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

The center would be paid with federal money made available through the State Office of Planning and Programming.

Estimated cost was tentatively set at $17,000.

The center would analyze investment in urban areas and in small Nebraska communities, attempting to identify causes of urban decay which result from barriers to the investment of private capital.

It would then be up to the committee to propose legislative solutions to the problem.

Resolution Sought Study

The proposal is the result of a legislative resolution seeking a study of urban development.

A number of committee members were less than enthusiastic about the study plan.

"I'm not for another study unless we can get results," Sen. Warren Swigart of Omaha said.

Sen. Herb Duis of Gothenburg expressed concern about the proposed purchase of outside assistance.

But Sen. Gerald Koch of Ralston said he is ready to approve the proposal.

Sen. Steve Fowler of Lincoln, committee chairman, said he will poll the members by telephone later this month to see if they want to go ahead with the plan.

'Will Be Worse'

The problem of urban decay is "bad now and it will be worse tomorrow," Dr. Ralph Todd, director of the Center for Applied Urban Research, told the senators.

Research would hopefully lead to constructive solutions, he said.

Under the study proposal, assistance would also be sought from the Department of Economic Development, the Federal Housing and Urban Development Department, the Farmers Home Administration and the U.S. Department of Agricluture's rural development staff.

Hearings would be held in Omaha, Lincoln and North Platte.

In other action, the committee ordered a staff study of procedures for choosing sites for state facilities.

Fowler said he hears complaints that "while the state directs communities to develop comprehensive plans, it does not pay much attention to them in selecting sites for its own facilities."

Diagnostic Center

A problem area in Lincoln is the proposed location of the Department of Correctional Services adult diagnostic and evaluation center at the Lincoln Regional Center, he noted.

That proposal is currently under review by Gov. J. James Exon.

Swigart questioned the lack of public hearing procedures in the legislative decision to locate a medium-minimum security prison in the Omaha area.

Another site selection decision which has prompted recent controversy was the proposed location of a drug dependency unit for correctional offenders near Crete, Fowler said.

That decision was rescinded by legislative action.

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

State Sen. Loran Schmit's $1.5 billion lawsuit against A&P ended Tuesday with a $85,000 settlement.

The suit originally had contended that A&P and Safeway were illegally fixing meat prices. Safeway agreed in March to a $40,000 settlement.

Both food chains, the two largest in the country, denied any wrongdoing in the settlements, filed in U.S. District Court.

The agreements include statements that the chains will take reasonable measures to assure the beef they purchase is obtained under fair terms and at prices arrived at on the open market.

The agreements also specify certain practices which the food chains contend they have not, and will not, engage in.

No Info Exchanges

For example, both agreed not to exchange fresh beef pricing information through private market reporting services.

Both sides agreed in the settlement that the litigation promised to be long and expensive.

Schmit stated in the agreement that the promises made by the two food chains achieve the objectives of the suit.

Some Turned Over

A&P agreed to turn over $45,000 immediately and Safeway has already turned over $5,000.

The rest of the money will be turned over in 18 months if no one else in the state sues for the same reasons Schmit did.

The 18-month time period in both settlements began from the date that 85% of those who donated to Schmit's lawsuit sign a "mutual covenant" not to sue on their own.

About 250 to 300 people contributed to legal expenses of the suit, according to documents on file in U.S. District Court.

Monitor Group

Richard Fellman of Omaha, one of the attornies in the suit, told the Associated Press that some of the money in the settlements will be used to set up an organization to monitor the activities covered in the agreement and to promote Nebraska livestock products.

The suit against the two food chains was similar to one decided last year in San Francisco.

In that suit Safeway agreed to a $90,000 settlement. A&P, however, fought and eventually lost. A jury made an award of $32.7 million to six California and Colorado livestock producers.

A&P, the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., later closed more than 1,000 stores its considered small and uneconomical.

Senators OK Visiting Guard Training Sites

The Legislature's Government, Military and Veterans Affairs Committee Tuesday decided to go to Louisiana and Texas to see how Nebraska National Guardsmen receive their basic training.

The committee will visit an Army training site at Fort Polk, La., and the Air Guard training base at San Antonio.

At the suggestion of Sen. Herb Duis of Gothenburg, the senators decided to include a stop at the North American Air Defense Command (NORAD) site near Denver.

The trip was tentatively scheduled for Oct. 6-9.

DeCamp For Study

The resolution, sponsored by Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, calls for a study of the needs of the Guard in recruiting and retaining personnel, its structural requirements and its fiscal needs.

Deputy Adj. Gen. Burl Johnson suggested a visit to the basic training sites, with briefings en route on recruiting, training, the Guard's disaster response capabilities and problems and a review of federal and state disaster laws.

Duis suggested the addition of a NORAD stop to include a look at communications requirements and proposed that members of the Legislature's telecommunications committee be invited to join in the trip.

"I am real concerned about our need for communications facilities in emergencies," Duis noted.

Three Disasters

The Guard has been active in three disaster situations thus far this year, the third being the spring tornadoes which swept through Omaha.

In other action, the committee scheduled a Sept. 27 hearing for state employes to air their opinions on the state's promotion policies.

Sen. Steve Fowler of Lincoln said he has heard "a lot of complaints" about promotion practices.

The committee has been directed to study the problem during the interim prior to the 1976 legislative session.

Fowler suggested that the committee take a look at promotion policies in other states and in private enterprise.

The September hearing was scheduled for a Saturday so state employes will be able to attend, Chairman Dennis Rasmussen of Scotia said.

Starting Of Omaha Lottery May, May Not Be Delayed

Omaha (AP)—It appears that Omaha's city lottery, "Big Green," will start Aug. 12 as scheduled, but there is still one fly in the ointment.

Omaha attorney Martin Cannon has filed suit, claiming the state law allowing city lotteries is unconstitutionally vague.

A hearing on Cannon's request for a temporary restraining order to halt the scheduled start of the lottery was to have been held Thursday of this week in Douglas County District Court, but that hearing has now been delayed until Aug. 7.

Former Lincoln Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf, named as the lottery's director about two weeks ago, says he thinks between 200,000 and 250,000 tickets will be sold for the first drawing.

The top prize will be $50,000, but the "big" one will only be awarded about every four or six weeks, Schwartzkopf said.

Schwartzkopf said he is looking forward to the drawing for the first $50,000 jackpot, and that he hopes it is won by a deserving person.

Sidney Schools, City Council Budgets Passed

Sidney (UPI) — The Sidney School Board has approved a 1975-76 budget of $1,815,000, an increase of $179,000 over last year.

School officials said Monday night 84% of the budget represents salaries, and most of the increase in the budget is due to a new state law requiring services for all handicapped students.

The board voted to take $150,000 from its cash reserves to offset the budget increase, which will allow the mill levy during the next school year to show little, if any, increase.

The Sidney City Council also approved Monday night its $975-76 fiscal year budget, which called for spending $1.1 million, $300,000 less than last year. However, the council approved a resolution to increase the property tax mill levy from 23.96 mills to about 30.25 mills.

Sound-Alikes Share Honor

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jon Matlack couldn't believe he would win or share the All-Star Game's Most Valuable Player award. He was sure it would go to his sound-alike, Bill Madlock.

"When they called the name right after the game, I thought sure Bill had won," said Matlack, the New York Mets' lefthander who was the winning pitcher in the National League's 6-3 victory over the Americans Tuesday night.

"But then I looked at Bill and I saw him looking at me," Matlack continued. "Then I realized maybe it was me. Then some guy grabbed both of us and told us we had both won. Fantastic! I was awestruck."

Matlack, firing what batterymate Johnny Bench of Cincinnati called "an exceptional fastball—faster than usual"—allowed two hits and struck out four while pitching the seventh and eighth innings.

Madlock, whose .353 batting average for the Chicago Cubs leads the NL, broke a 3-3 tie with a bases-loaded two-run single in the ninth inning.

Matlack was warming up in the sixth when a ball suddenly bounced a few feet away from him in the right-center field bullpen. It was a three-run homer hit by Carl Yastrzemski that pulled the AL into the 3-3 tie.

"I had kind of a sinking feeling," Matlack said. "It was getting late in the game and I'm sure it gave them a lift. But I really think the National League has more talent. I thought we could come back and I was determined to hold them.

"I threw mostly exploding fastballs, really lively," he said. "In that situation I was trying to put my best foot forward. That meant fastballs.

"I wasn't going to get beat by some slipshod curve. I was going to go with my winning pitch and make them prove they could hit it."

Matlack completed his two innings by firing a bullet past Boston rookie Fred Lynn, one of baseball's hottest hitters, in the eighth inning with the tie-breaking run on third base.

"Jim Palmer of Baltimore had been talking about him like he was kind of a Greek god, an unbelievable hitter with cork on his bat or something," Matlack said. "But I decided to keep throwing fastballs, move them around. I got him on the inside corner, knee high."

Madlock's decisive hit was a hard grounder, about two feet inside the third base bag and just off the glove of New York Yankee third baseman Graig Nettles.

"Nettles had to play off the line on me because I spray the ball around," Madlock said. "I hit a changeup on the inside. Catfish Hunter had thrown me two balls away and I was looking for something off-speed."

Hunter, the Yankees' ace, wasn't his usual tantalizing self. And Steve Garvey of the Los Angeles Dodgers said AL starting pitcher Vida Blue didn't have his customary overpowering fastball.

Garvey and teammate Jimmy Wynn staked the Nationals to a 2-0 lead with successive homers leading off the second against Blue, who was tagged for five hits in two innings.

"I definitely have seen Blue faster," said Garvey, the MVP in last year's All-Star game. "He had thrown Bench breaking pitches the previous inning and I thought he would try to get his fastball back a little. I hit a fastball."

It also was a rocky night for the New York Mets' 13-game winner, two-time Cy Young Award winner Tom Seaver. He was the victim of Yastrzemski's homer.

"Tom was throwing well," Bench said. "I called for a Tom Seaver fastball, which is more than your ordinary fastball, and I just didn't get it.

"But I told Tom not to worry," Bench added. "I told him at least he made the game interesting."

Frogs Spared From Firearms

Nebraska's bullfrog season is under way, but the popular old-time method of sniping the croakers with a small-caliber firearm is no longer allowed, reminds the Game and Parks Commission.

Legal methods for taking frogs include hook-and-line, gigging, dipnetting, or scrambling after them with bare hands. Bow and arrows may also be used on frogs, except on state parks and recreation areas.

Nebraskans 16 and older and nonresidents must have a fishing permit to go after bullfrogs. Bag and possession limits is eight.

Alston Extends All-Star Mark

Milwaukee (AP) — The National League's 6-3 All-Star game victory Tuesday night enabled Walter Alston of Los Angeles to extend his own record for managing the most winning All-Star teams.

The victory was Alston's seventh as NL manager. He previously had won games in 1956, two in 1960, 1964, 1966 and 1967.

Oakland pitcher Vida Blue tied a negative mark when he allowed two home runs in one inning. Dodger teammates Steve Garvey and Jimmy Wynn connected for consecutive homers in the second inning.

Kansas City's Steve Busby tied the record for the most balks in an inning or a game when he committed one in the third inning.

Carl Yastrzemski of Boston became the 12th player to hit a pinch homer in All-Star competition.

Three players, Araon, Bobby Bonds of the New York Yankees and Bobby Murcer of San Francisco — tied another mark by participating in All-Star competition for each league.

He also was a member of the Augustana Lutheran Church of North America executive council during the same period. Dr. Hall then served on the Iowa conference executive board from 1954 to 1959.

Ordained in 1927, Dr. Hall was pastor at churches throughout Nebraska including Salem Church in Wakefield, First Lutheran Church in Lincoln and Bethel Lutheran Church in Holdrege.

Other offices he held included president and secretary of Omaha's Immanuel Deaconess Institute and membership on the Red River Valley Conference executive board.

Dr. Hall was a Nebraska conference executive board member from 1955 to 1962. He then retired in 1964 to Rock Island, Ill.

He is survived by his wife Mildred, two sons and two daughters.

John Kidd Rites Held In McCook

McCook (UPI) — Services were held here Monday for John A. (Jack) Kidd, a well-known Nebraska pharmacist who had operated drug stores in Upland, Omaha and McCook for nearly 40 years.

He was born in Adams County and attended schools at Kenesaw. He graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1923. He operated a pharmacy at Upland from 1924 to 1928 and in Omaha from 1929 to 1939. He operated Kidd's pharmacy in McCook from 1939 to 1963.

Kidd was survived by his wife and a daughter.

Services Held For Ainsworth Blast Victim

Little Rock, Calif. (UPI) — Services were held Monday for a Little Rock, Calif., man, who was fatally injured last month in a house explosion at Ainsworth, Neb.

George Langer, 66, died at an Omaha, Neb., hospital July 10 of complications from second degree burns over 80% of his body. His wife, Margaret, also was injured but was dismissed from an Ainsworth hospital a week ago.

Authorities said the explosion destroyed the home where Langer and his wife were staying in Ainsworth. They were in Nebraska to buy antiques and had been staying at the home of Langer's sister, Mary Langer.

The cause of the explosion was still unknown.

State Senators Endorse GOP Testimony Plan

Four state senators Tuesday endorsed the Republican Party's program to encourage local citizens to testify at legislative hearings throughout the state this year.

The GOP effort is "innovative and tuned in to the needs of the people across the state," Sens. Jerome Warner of Waverly, James Dickinson of Millard, Douglas Bereuter of Utica and Warren Swigart of Omaha said.

Legislative hearings during the interim between Unicameral sessions "provide a real opportunity for local Republicans to express their views without going to Lincoln to do it," the senators noted.

Planners Offer Transport Info

The City-County Planning Department is developing a roster of people and organizations interested in receiving information on the transportation plan now being written.

Planning Director Doug Brogden said those interested in obtaining such information should contact his office.

UNL To Study Frosh Teaching

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln will receive a $99,840 grant from the Exxon Education Foundation to research a new approach to teaching college freshmen.

The grant will be used for a program to help students bridge the gap between concrete thinking and abstract reasoning.

Senators To Run As Delegates

Washington (UPI) — Nebraska Sens. Roman Hruska and Carl Curtis said Tuesday they will run for delegate posts to the 1976 Republican National Convention, but the state's three representatives, also Republicans, said they probably will not.

Hruska said he is pledged to President Ford, but Curtis said he will make a committment at the time he files.

President Ford is the only announced Republican candidate, but Curtis is known as one of the most conservative senators. Observers said he may be waiting for Ronald Reagan to declare as a presidential candidate.

Rep. John Y. McCollister said he is not seeking a delegate spot because he has "other important fish to fry." He is expected to file for the Senate seat being vacated by Hruska next year.

Rep. Charles Thone said the odds are strong that he will not be a delegate candidate, and Rep. Virginia Smith said it is too early to make a decision.

Airport Board Nixes Promotion Levy

The Lincoln Airport Authority Tuesday took heed of the campaign blast fired by newly elected member Don Geis and decided not to request a .1 mill levy for promotion.

The money is used to send representatives to Civil Aeronautics Board hearings and fund projects aimed at stimulating use of the airport.

It now has a balance of about $100,000.

The decision came during a meeting at which a $2.5 million revenue budget was approved by the board.

In other action Jack Radican, Lincoln director for United Airlines, warned board members that the decontrolling of oil prices would drastically affect the air industry.

He said the price of the gas a Boeing 747 uses on a 2,500 miles route would rise from the 1973 price of $1.6 annually to $5.9 annually.

Motorcyclist's Condition Fair

Patrick D. Cash, 22, of 830 Rutland Dr., was listed in fair condition at Lincoln General Hospital Tuesday night with injuries suffered in a car-motorcycle accident at 17th and R Sts. Monday.

He had been listed in critical condition.

Police said Cash was westbound on R St. when his motorcycle collided with a car eastbound on R St.

Causes Of Urban Decay In State May Be Studied

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature's Urban Affairs Committee Tuesday discussed the possibility of employing research consultants to probe the causes of urban decay in Nebraska.

Under discussion was a plan to use the Center for Applied Urban Research at the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

The center would be paid with federal money made available through the State Office of Planning and Programming.

Estimated cost was tentatively set at $17,000.

The center would analyze investment in urban areas and in small Nebraska communities, attempting to identify causes of urban decay which result from barriers to the investment of private capital.

It would then be up to the committee to propose legislative solutions to the problem.

Resolution Sought Study

The proposal is the result of a legislative resolution seeking a study of urban development.

A number of committee members were less than enthusiastic about the study plan.

"I'm not for another study unless we can get results," Sen. Warren Swigart of Omaha said.

Sen. Herb Duis of Gothenburg expressed concern about the proposed purchase of outside assistance.

But Sen. Gerald Koch of Ralston said he is ready to approve the proposal.

Sen. Steve Fowler of Lincoln, committee chairman, said he will poll the members by telephone later this month to see if they want to go ahead with the plan.

'Will Be Worse'

The problem of urban decay is "bad now and it will be worse tomorrow," Dr. Ralph Todd, director of the Center for Applied Urban Research, told the senators.

Research would hopefully lead to constructive solutions, he said.

Under the study proposal, assistance would also be sought from the Department of Economic Development, the Federal Housing and Urban Development Department, the Farmers Home Administration and the U.S. Department of Agriculture's rural development staff.

In other action, the committee ordered a staff study of procedures for choosing sites for state facilities.

Fowler said he hears complaints that "while the state directs communities to develop comprehensive plans, it does not pay much attention to them in selecting sites for its own facilities."

Diagnostic Center

A problem area in Lincoln is the proposed location of the Department of Correctional Services adult diagnostic and evaluation center at the Lincoln Regional Center, he noted.

That proposal is currently under review by Gov. J. James Exon.

Swigart questioned the lack of public hearing procedures in the legislative decision to locate a medium-minimum security prison in the Omaha area.

Another site selection decision which has prompted recent controversy was the proposed location of a drug dependency unit for correctional offenders near Crete, Fowler said.

That decision was rescinded by legislative action.

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

State Sen. Loran Schmit's $1.5 billion lawsuit against A&P ended Tuesday with a $85,000 settlement.

The suit originally had contended that A&P and Safeway were illegally fixing meat prices. Safeway agreed in March to a $40,000 settlement.

Both food chains, the two largest in the country, denied any wrongdoing in the settlements, filed in U.S. District Court.

The agreements include statements that the chains will take reasonable measures to assure the beef they purchase is obtained under fair terms and at prices arrived at on the open market.

The agreements also specify certain practices which the food chains contend they have not, and will not, engage in.

No Info Exchanges

For example, both agreed not to exchange fresh beef pricing information through private market reporting services.

Both sides agreed in the settlement that the litigation promised to be long and expensive.

Schmit stated in the agreement that the promises made by the two food chains achieve the objectives of the suit.

Some Turned Over

A&P agreed to turn over $45,000 immediately and Safeway has already turned over $5,000.

The rest of the money will be turned over in 18 months if no one else in the state sues for the same reasons Schmit did.

The 18-month time period in both settlements began from the date that 85% of those who donated to Schmit's lawsuit sign a "mutual covenant" not to sue on their own.

About 250 to 300 people contributed to legal expenses of the suit, according to documents on file in U.S. District Court.

Monitor Group

Richard Fellman of Omaha, one of the attornies in the suit, told the Associated Press that some of the money in the settlements will be used to set up an organization to monitor the activities covered in the agreement and to promote Nebraska livestock products.

The suit against the two food chains was similar to one decided last year in San Francisco.

In that suit Safeway agreed to a $90,000 settlement. A&P, however, fought and eventually lost. A jury made an award of $32.7 million to six California and Colorado livestock producers.

A&P, the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., later closed more than 1,000 stores its considered small and uneconomical.

Senators OK Visiting Guard Training Sites

The Legislature's Government, Military and Veterans Affairs Committee Tuesday decided to go to Louisiana and Texas to see how Nebraska National Guardsmen receive their basic training.

The committee will visit an Army training site at Fort Polk, La., and the Air Guard training base at San Antonio.

At the suggestion of Sen. Herb Duis of Gothenburg, the senators decided to include a stop at the North American Air Defense Command (NORAD) site near Denver.

The trip was tentatively scheduled for Oct. 6-9.

DeCamp For Study

The resolution, sponsored by Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, calls for a study of the needs of the Guard in recruiting and retaining personnel, its structural requirements and its fiscal needs.

Deputy Adj. Gen. Burl Johnson suggested a visit to the basic training sites, with briefings en route on recruiting, training, the Guard's disaster response capabilities and problems and a review of federal and state disaster laws

Duis suggested the addition of a NORAD stop to include a look at communications requirements and proposed that members of the Legislature's telecommunications committee be invited to join in the trip.

"I am real concerned about our need for communications facilities in emergencies," Duis noted.

Johnson said the Guard was completely dependent on telephone communications during two blizzard emergencies this year

Three Disasters

The Guard has been active in three disaster situations thus far this year, the third being the spring tornadoes which swept through Omaha.

In other action, the committee scheduled a Sept. 27 hearing for state employes to air their opinions on the state's promotion policies.

Sen. Steve Fowler of Lincoln said he has heard "a lot of complaints" about promotion practices.

The committee has been directed to study the problem during the interim prior to the 1976 legislative session.

Fowler suggested that the committee take a look at promotion policies in other states and in private enterprise.

The September hearing was scheduled for a Saturday so state employes will be able to attend, Chairman Dennis Rasmussen of Scotia said.

Starting Of Omaha Lottery May, May Not Be Delayed

Omaha (AP)—It appears that Omaha's city lottery, "Big Green," will start Aug. 12 as scheduled, but there is still one fly in the ointment.

Omaha attorney Martin Cannon has filed suit, claiming the state law allowing city lotteries is unconstitutionally vague.

A hearing on Cannon's request for a temporary restraining order to halt the scheduled start of the lottery was to have been held Thursday of this week in Douglas County District Court, but that hearing has now been delayed until Aug. 7.

Former Lincoln Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf, named as the lottery's director about two weeks ago, says he thinks between 200,000 and 250,000 tickets will be sold for the first drawing.

The top prize will be $50,000, but the "big" one will only be awarded about every four or six weeks, Schwartzkopf said.

Schwartzkopf said he is looking forward to the drawing for the first $50,000 jackpot, and that he hopes it is won by a deserving person.

Sidney Schools, City Council Budgets Passed

Sidney (UPI) — The Sidney School Board has approved a 1975-76 budget of $1,815,000, an increase of $179,000 over last year.

School officials said Monday night 84% of the budget represents salaries, and most of the increase in the budget is due to a new state law requiring services for all handicapped students.

The board voted to take $150,000 from its cash reserves to offset the budget increase, which will allow the mill levy during the next school year to show little, if any, increase.

The Sidney City Council also approved Monday night its 1975-76 fiscal year budget, which called for spending $1.1 million, $300,000 less than last year. However, the council approved a resolution to increase the property tax mill levy from 23.96 mills to about 30.25 mills.

I understand there's a new law that allows suspended drivers to drive to and from work under certain circumstances. What's the story on this?

—Walking, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Persons who have lost their driver's license from either refusing to take an alcohol test or on points may apply to the Department of Motor Vehicles for the new type of permit. An affidavit is needed stating economic necessity; an employer statement describing the need for the employe to drive; and a certificate of proof of financial responsibility must accompany the application. The erring driver must also agree to attend and complete an eight-hour driver improvement course within 60 days. More information can be obtained by writing the Department of Motor Vehicles, State Capitol, P.O. Box 94789, Lincoln 68509. Persons who have had their licenses revoked or suspended by a court are not eligible for the new program.

What was the problem with the civil defense sirens last week? My ears are still aching.

—Wondering, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Civil Defense Director George Drake explains the sirens are radio activated and sometimes don't respond to the signals to turn them on or off as the case may be. He says an added problem was that the siren that stuck last time was on top of the YMCA which is very difficult to get to and the location slowed efforts to turn it off. Drake notes there is less than a 3% malfunction rate per year.

Small Claims Courts are a fine way to save money, but what do you do if you gain a judgment against someone and he refuses to pay?

—Curious, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: State Court Administrator James Dunlevey says the procedure would be the same as used in other civil litigation. He says in this case an attorney would be advisable and he notes an attorney's fees can be tacked on to a garnishment or execution (seizure of property). Dunlevey does note the rate of satisfaction seems to be better for small claims judgments than for judgments obtained in the regular process.

I have $25 wrapped up in Record Club of America. I know you've had something on this, but I've lost the article. Can you repeat how a person goes about getting his money back?

—J.T., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The club filed bankruptcy petitions in February. Any member who has a claim is an unsecured creditor and should file a proof of claim form with the bankruptcy judge. The proper forms can be obtained by writing to the judge. The address is Thomas C. Gibbons, Bankruptcy Judge, P.O. Box 908, Harrisburg, Pa. 17108.

I sent a check for $15.95 to Nirestk Discount Sales in April for a fishing kit. The check has been cashed and two letters to the company have failed to elicit a response. Can ACTION LINE help?

—K.H., Raymond

ACTION LINE: A spokesman for the firm's customer relations department says the firm had to order more kits from the manufacturer. Then apparently only half were received. However, she notes you should have received the kit before now even with the delays. She is going to check the firm's files to see when and if your kit was sent. If it was sent she will place a tracer on it and find out why it was not delivered. You will be receiving a letter from the firm shortly explaining the delay; the company promises you will get either the kit or a complete refund.

Butz Hopes For Big Sale To Russians

Minneapolis, Minn. (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz said U.S. farmers are producing three times as much wheat as the nation will consume this year and he hopes the United States will negotiate a "big sale" of grain to Russia.

Butz said there is nothing evil about selling grain to the Soviet Union and it's "far better to exchange wheat with them than bullets."

Feed grain crops this year "never looked better," he said.

Butz said flood damage was "very very serious" for farmers in the Red River Valley in eastern North Dakota and northwestern Minnesota but he said the losses there will have only a small impact nationally.

To Your Good Health:

Severe Sunburn Can Cause Tissue Damage

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: About two years ago I had a very bad sunburn on my legs. They swelled up, especially at the ankles. I had no medical treatment.

Now, even though there is no redness or swelling, I still get this burning feeling, especially around the ankles. Do you think this is caused by the sunburn two years ago?—B.K.R.

Severe sunburn, especially one severe enough to have caused the swelling you describe, can cause tissue damage. Severe sunburn can be dangerous in many ways. For example, hair follicles and sweat glands could become involved. In such cases infection may, but not necessarily, accompany it.

Although two years is a rather long time for symptoms to persist, it is quite possible your present discomfort is traceable to your earlier sunburn episode, since you did not have such symptoms before that time.

You should see your doctor, or a dermatologist, if possible.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have an elderly aunt (in her mid-70s) who has mild diabetes, a healed ulcer, and diverticulosis.

Now she has been having some throat trouble. Barium X-rays showed nothing. She has trouble swallowing, and says it feels like a soft lump clinging to the inside of her throat.

The doctor says there is nothing he can do and that she has to live with it. The family is quite concerned. She is up and around every day and can do light work around the house.

The doctor's "live with it" seems quite harsh, don't you think? Do you have any information that would be helpful?—C.A.M.

It can sound harsh, but sometimes — usually in cases such as these — it is all the doctor can say until something more explicit develops.

With the combination of ailments, past and present (diabetes, ulcer, diverticulosis), hers is a difficult problem to evaluate easily. It does sound as though there could be some neurological disturbance affecting her swallowing mechanism.

Mild diabetes can cause this. So can a "little stroke." The barium swallow X-ray should have revealed the presence of any real lump. It would be more difficult to determine the cause of any neurological problem.

If your aunt does have what is called "diabetic neuritis," it would reveal itself in other findings. There might be an eye muscle weakness, for example, or a tingling of the extremities, and perhaps a lessening of tendon reflex revealed in the knee-jerk tests.

Careful control of diabetes is essential, and don't let the term "mild diabetes" fool your aunt into complacency.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can you give me some kind of information concerning a skin disease called lupus?

I have been to a skin specialist, and was told this was what I have. I use a skin cream that helps a lot, but it never goes away completely. I've heard that it is incurable. I've had it for about five years, and have been told the sun has a lot to do with it. I break out on my face.

From your description, this sounds like chronic discoid lupus erythematosus. If so, it must be distinguished from the other type of lupus "systemic" lupus erythematosus, in which skin lesions are incidental symptoms of a more serious disorder.

The cause of the first type, which you appear to have, is not known, except that sunlight often prompts the initial appearance of the lesions. It is most common in women in their 30s, and the lesions, as you are quite aware by now, can persist or recur over many years.

The characteristic symptoms are round, patchy, scaly spots, and the face is a common site for them. It can be confused with rosacea, seborrheic dermatitis, or to rash reactions from drugs.

Although your symptoms can resemble those of the more serious lupus I mentioned, this can rather easily be ruled out by a specialist, which apparently has been done in your case.

It is important for you to avoid sunlight as much as possible, or ot obtain a sun-screening lotion. Steroid creams can be helpful.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I get such terrific pain in the toes on both of my feet. I can't walk barefoot across a floor.

A foot specialist told me they were nerve tumors, and that I should wear metatarsal bars in my shoes. These don't seem to help. Do you think surgery on my toes would help to get rid of the pain?—Mrs. A.N.

This is called Morton's neuroma. The cause often is faulty footwear, especially the high heels that women (more recently men) wear which exert abnormal stress on the metatarsal portion of the foot — the front part. This can cause pressure on the nerves, as suggested by your foot specialist.

Conservative treatment is to adjust the arch support with bars, such as those you mention. These are inserted into the shoe soles to relieve pressures.

Since this has not been effective, you might be a candidate for surgical removal of the tumors, something you would be wise to investigate.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Ever since 1958, when the National Foundation of the March of Dimes turned its attention from polio to birth defects, the development of a child within its mother has been a subject for special study.

The Nebraska Medical Association points out that as more infants are protected from childhood infections, the number of those with disabling birth defects who live to adulthood increases. Recent research has been most productive in this problem as old as time.

A test has been developed to detect both victims and symptom-free carriers of an inherited disease called galactosemia, a chemical birth defect which causes mental retardation in babies when they drink milk.

Maple sugar urine disease now can be detected. This condition generally results in mental retardation and death by age two.

Illinois Funeral Set For Dr. Hall, Former State Lutheran Leader

Funeral services will be held Thursday in Moline, Ill., for Dr. Clarence P. Hall, former president of Nebraska's Augustana Synod Lutheran Churches Conference, who died Monday. He was 74.

Dr. Hall was conference president from 1944-52, at the same time serving as Wyoming's conference president. He also was a member of the Augustana Lutheran Church of North America executive council during the same period. Dr. Hall then served on the Iowa conference executive board from 1954 to 1959.

Ordained in 1927, Dr. Hall was pastor at churches throughout Nebraska including Salem Church in Wakefield, First Lutheran Church in Lincoln and Bethel Lutheran Church in Holdrege.

Other offices he held included president and secretary of Omaha's Immanuel Deaconess Institute and membership on the Red River Valley Conference executive board.

Dr. Hall was a Nebraska conference executive board member from 1955 to 1962. He then retired in 1964 to Rock Island, Ill.

He is survived by his wife Mildred, two sons and two daughters.

John Kidd Rites Held In McCook

McCook (UPI) — Services were held here Monday for John A. (Jack) Kidd, a well-known Nebraska pharmacist who had operated drug stores in Upland, Omaha and McCook for nearly 40 years.

He was born in Adams County and attended schools at Kenesaw. He graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1923. He operated a pharmacy at Upland from 1924 to 1928 and in Omaha from 1929 to 1939. He operated Kidd's pharmacy in McCook from 1939 to 1963.

Kidd was survived by his wife and a daughter.

Services Held For Ainsworth Blast Victim

Little Rock, Calif. (UPI) — Services were held Monday for a Little Rock, Calif., man, who was fatally injured last month in a house explosion at Ainsworth, Neb.

George Langer, 66, died at an Omaha, Neb., hospital July 10 of complications from second degree burns over 80% of his body. His wife, Margaret, also was injured but was dismissed from an Ainsworth hospital a week ago.

Authorities said the explosion destroyed the home where Langer and his wife were staying in Ainsworth. They were in Nebraska to buy antiques and had been staying at the home of Langer's sister, Mary Langer.

The cause of the explosion was still unknown.

State Senators Endorse GOP Testimony Plan

Four state senators Tuesday endorsed the Republican Party's program to encourage local citizens to testify at legislative hearings throughout the state this year.

The GOP effort is "innovative and tuned in to the needs of the people across the state," Sens. Jerome Warner of Waverly, James Dickinson of Millard, Douglas Bereuter of Utica and Warren Swigart of Omaha said.

Legislative hearings during the interim between Unicameral sessions "provide a real opportunity for local Republicans to express their views without going to Lincoln to do it," the senators noted.

Planners Offer Transport Info

The City-County Planning Department is developing a roster of people and organizations interested in receiving information on the transportation plan now being written.

Planning Director Doug Brogden said those interested in obtaining such information should contact his office.

UNL To Study Frosh Teaching

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln will receive a $99,840 grant from the Exxon Education Foundation to research a new approach to teaching college freshmen.

The grant will be used for a program to help students bridge the gap between concrete thinking and abstract reasoning.

Senators To Run As Delegates

Washington (UPI) — Nebraska Sens. Roman Hruska and Carl Curtis said Tuesday they will run for delegate posts to the 1976 Republican National Convention, but the state's three representatives, also Republicans, said they probably will not.

Hruska said he is pledged to President Ford, but Curtis said he will make a committment at the time he files.

President Ford is the only announced Republican candidate, but Curtis is known as one of the most conservative senators. Observers said he may be waiting for Ronald Reagan to declare as a presidential candidate.

Rep. John Y. McCollister said he is not seeking a delegate spot because he has "other important fish to fry." He is expected to file for the Senate seat being vacated by Hruska next year.

Rep. Charles Thone said the odds are strong that he will not be a delegate candidate, and Rep. Virginia Smith said it is too early to make a decision.

Airport Board Nixes Promotion Levy

The Lincoln Airport Authority Tuesday took heed of the campaign blast fired by newly elected member Don Geis and decided not to request a .1 mill levy for promotion.

The money is used to send representatives to Civil Aeronautics Board hearings and fund projects aimed at stimulating use of the airport.

It now has a balance of about $100,000.

The decision came during a meeting at which a $2.5 million revenue budget was approved by the board.

In other action Jack Radican, Lincoln director for United Airlines, warned board members that the decontrolling of oil prices would drastically affect the air industry.

He said the price of the gas a Boeing 747 uses on a 2,500 miles route would rise from the 1973 price of $1.6 annually to $5.9 annually.

Motorcyclist's Condition Fair

Patrick D. Cash, 22, of 830 Rutland Dr., was listed in fair condition at Lincoln General Hospital Tuesday night with injuries suffered in a car-motorcycle accident at 17th and R Sts. Monday.

He had been listed in critical condition.

ACTION LINE

DIAL 477-2121

Or Write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, NE 68501

I understand there's a new law that allows suspended drivers to drive to and from work under certain circumstances. What's the story on this?

—Walking, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Persons who have lost their driver's license from either refusing to take an alcohol test or on points may apply to the Department of Motor Vehicles for the new type of permit. An affidavit is needed stating economic necessity; an employer statement describing the need for the employe to drive; and a certificate of proof of financial responsibility must accompany the application. The erring driver must also agree to attend and complete an eight-hour driver improvement course within 60 days. More information can be obtained by writing the Department of Motor Vehicles, State Capitol, P.O. Box 94789, Lincoln 68509. Persons who have had their licenses revoked or suspended by a court are not eligible for the new program.

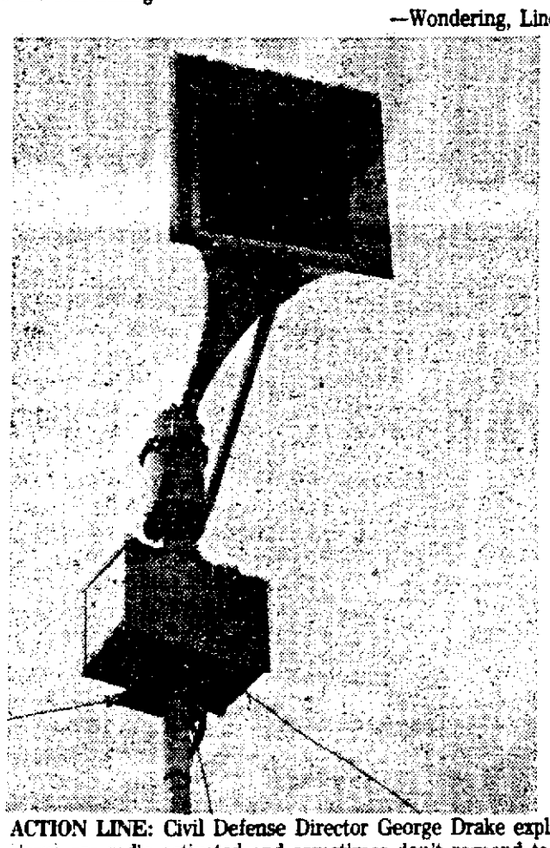
I do woodwork and furniture refinishing, but have been unable to locate the type of glue I need for my work. Can ACTION LINE lend a hand?

—Need Help, Beatrice

ACTION LINE: Tom Kosiva, with the customer service department of LePages Inc. of Pittsburgh, Pa., has your name and address. He will locate the store nearest to you and supply you with the address so you can order the glue.

What was the problem with the civil defense sirens last week? My ears are still aching.

—Wondering, Lincoln



ACTION LINE: Civil Defense Director George Drake explains the sirens are radio activated and sometimes don't respond to the signals to turn them on or off as the case may be. He says an added problem was that the siren that stuck last time was on top of the YMCA which is very difficult to get to and the location slowed efforts to turn it off. Drake notes there is less than a 3% malfunction rate per year.

Small Claims Courts are a fine way to save money, but what do you do if you gain a judgment against someone and he refuses to pay?

—Curious, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: State Court Administrator James Dunlevey says the procedure would be the same as used in other civil litigation. He says in this case an attorney would be advisable and he notes an attorney's fees can be tacked on to a garnishment or execution (seizure of property). Dunlevey does note the rate of satisfaction seems to be better for small claims judgments than for judgments obtained in the regular process.

I have $25 wrapped up in Record Club of America. I know you've had something on this, but I've lost the article. Can you repeat how a person goes about getting his money back?

—J.T., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The club filed bankruptcy petitions in February. Any member who has a claim is an unsecured creditor and should file a proof of claim form with the bankruptcy judge. The proper forms can be obtained by writing to the judge. The address is Thomas C. Gibbons, Bankruptcy Judge, P.O. Box 908, Harrisburg, Pa. 17108.

I sent a check for $15.95 to Nirestk Discount Sales in April for a fishing kit. The check has been cashed and two letters to the company have failed to elicit a response. Can ACTION LINE help?

—K.H., Raymond

ACTION LINE: A spokesman for the firm's customer relations department says the firm had to order more kits from the manufacturer. Then apparently only half were received. However, she notes you should have received the kit before now even with the delays. She is going to check the firm's files to see when and if your kit was sent. If it was sent she will place a tracer on it and find out why it was not delivered. You will be receiving a letter from the firm shortly explaining the delay; the company promises you will get either the kit or a complete refund.

Butz Hopes For Big Sale To Russians

Minneapolis, Minn. (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz said U.S. farmers are producing three times as much wheat as the nation will consume this year and he hopes the United States will negotiate a "big sale" of grain to Russia.

Butz said there is nothing evil about selling grain to the Soviet Union and it's "far better to exchange wheat with them than bullets."

Feed grain crops this year "never looked better," he said.

Butz said flood damage was "very very serious" for farmers in the Red River Valley in eastern North Dakota and northwestern Minnesota but he said the losses there will have only a small impact nationally.

Fake Snakes Con Real Birds

Phoenix, Ariz. (AP(— Two rubber snakes have outfoxed a covey of pigeons at a Phoenix department store.

Two rubber snakes were suspended from the roof of the building to scare the pigeons away and apparently it's working.

"We were anxious to try anything," said Toland Snap, service manager for a Broadway Store. "Those pigeons made a mess of things; customers don't like to have droppings on their clothes."

"The snakes are doing the trick," Snap said.

Severe Sunburn Can Cause Tissue Damage

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: About two years ago I had a very bad sunburn on my legs. They swelled up, especially at the ankles. I had no medical treatment.

Now, even though there is no redness or swelling, I still get this burning feeling, especially around the ankles. Do you think this is caused by the sunburn two years ago?—B.K.R.

Severe sunburn, especially one severe enough to have caused the swelling you describe, can cause tissue damage. Severe sunburn can be dangerous in many ways. For example, hair follicles and sweat glands could become involved. In such cases infection may, but not necessarily, accompany it.

Although two years is a rather long time for symptoms to persist, it is quite possible your present discomfort is traceable to your earlier sunburn episode, since you did not have such symptoms before that time.

You should see your doctor, or a dermatologist, if possible.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have an elderly aunt (in her mid-70s) who has mild diabetes, a healed ulcer, and diverticulosis.

Now she has been having some throat trouble. Barium X-rays showed nothing. She has trouble swallowing, and says it feels like a soft lump clinging to the inside of her throat.

The doctor says there is nothing he can do and that she has to live with it. The family is quite concerned. She is up and around every day and can do light work around the house.

The doctor's "live with it" seems quite harsh, don't you think? Do you have any information that would be helpful?—C.A.M.

It can sound harsh, but sometimes — usually in cases such as these — it is all the doctor can say until something more explicit develops.

With the combination of ailments, past and present (diabetes, ulcer, diverticulosis), hers is a difficult problem to evaluate easily. It does sound as though there could be some neurological disturbance affecting her swallowing mechanism.

Mild diabetes can cause this. So can a "little stroke." The barium swallow X-ray should have revealed the presence of any real lump. It would be more difficult to determine the cause of any neurological problem.

If your aunt does have what is called "diabetic neuritis," it would reveal itself in other findings. There might be an eye muscle weakness, for example, or a tingling of the extremities, and perhaps a lessening of tendon reflex revealed in the knee-jerk tests.

Careful control of diabetes is essential, and don't let the term "mild diabetes" fool your aunt into complacency.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can you give me some kind of information concerning a skin disease called lupus?

I have been to a skin specialist, and was told this was what I have. I use a skin cream that helps a lot, but it never goes away completely. I've heard that it is incurable. I've had it for about five years, and have been told the sun has a lot to do with it. I break out on my face.

From your description, this sounds like chronic discoid lupus erythematosus. If so, it must be distinguished from the other type of lupus "systemic" lupus erythematosus, in which skin lesions are incidental symptoms of a more serious disorder.

The cause of the first type, which you appear to have, is not known, except that sunlight often prompts the initial appearance of the lesions. It is most common in women in their 30s, and the lesions, as you are quite aware by now, can persist or recur over many years.

The characteristic symptoms are round, patchy, scaly spots, and the face is a common site for them. It can be confused with rosacea, seborrheic dermatitis, or to rash reactions from drugs.

Although your symptoms can resemble those of the more serious lupus I mentioned, this can rather easily be ruled out by a specialist, which apparently has been done in your case.

It is important for you to avoid sunlight as much as possible, or ot obtain a sun-screening lotion. Steroid creams can be helpful.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I get such terrific pain in the toes on both of my feet. I can't walk barefoot across a floor.

A foot specialist told me they were nerve tumors, and that I should wear metatarsal bars in my shoes. These don't seem to help. Do you think surgery on my toes would help to get rid of the pain?—Mrs. A.N.

This is called Morton's neuroma. The cause often is faulty footwear, especially the high heels that women (more recently men) wear which exert abnormal stress on the metatarsal portion of the foot — the front part. This can cause pressure on the nerves, as suggested by your foot specialist.

Conservative treatment is to adjust the arch support with bars, such as those you mention. These are inserted into the shoe soles to relieve pressures.

Since this has not been effective, you might be a candidate for surgical removal of the tumors, something you would be wise to investigate.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Ever since 1958, when the National Foundation of the March of Dimes turned its attention from polio to birth defects, the development of a child within its mother has been a subject for special study.

The Nebraska Medical Association points out that as more infants are protected from childhood infections, the number of those with disabling birth defects who live to adulthood increases. Recent research has been most productive in this problem as old as time.

A test has been developed to detect both victims and symptom-free carriers of an inherited disease called galactosemia, a chemical birth defect which causes mental retardation in babies when they drink milk.

Maple sugar urine disease now can be detected. This condition generally results in mental retardation and death by age two.

Stock Market Climbs To 15-Month High

NEW YORK (AP) — Evidence of a developing upturn in the economy helped lift the stock market to a new 15-month closing high in heavy trading Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials gained 5.95 to 881.81, its highest close since it finished at 883.68 on March 26, 1974.

Brokers said the driving force behind the gains was a carryover of enthusiasm over Monday's report by the Commerce Department that business inventories had fallen a record $2.97 billion in May.

Optimism on the economic outlook was reinforced late in Tuesday's session by the Federal Reserve Board's report that industrial production rose in June for the f rst time in nine months.

But by that time some profit taking had begun to appear, and the Dow settled back a bit from its midafternoon high of nearly plus-7.

Lee Enterprises Net Up 37.9%

Davenport, Iowa (AP) — Lee Enterprises, Inc., has reported a 37.9 per cent increase in net income for the third quarter ended June 30.

Lee President Lloyd G. Schermer said Monday the company had a third-quarter net income of $1,947,000, or 59 cents per common share, compared with $1,412,000, or 42 cents per share for the same period last year.

Operating revenue for the third quarter increased 14.2 per cent to $14,430,000, Schermer said.

Widows Urged To Be Patient

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — Widows are often at a loss as far as financial matters are concerned. Dozens of things must be attended to in the weeks following a husband's death, and dozens of decisions made.

Yet to the extent that a new widow is inexperienced in handling money, these things are puzzling, even threatening. Nor is she in emotional shape to make decisions that will affect her far into the future.

Lawyers, relatives and friends will cluster around, offering advice and laying out options. In some cases, hasty action will seem necessary. But given her emotional stress, a widow often sees money matters as trivial, something to be left to others while she absorbs herself in her grief. She may let her children or friends make important decisions for her. This she could live to regret.

The best counsel a widow can have in the weeks and months after her husband's death is to be patient. She should file immediately for whatever benefits she's entitled to, but make no final decisions as to the disposition of assets.

Younger widows, especially, have no idea what direction their lives may take, or what they'll have to do to provide for themselves and their children. Older widows are more settled and may even have discussed with their husbands such things as what to do with insurance proceeds. But even they should advance slowly into this phase of their lives.

Here is a brief checklist of what a widow has to attend to first. All other decisions, such as where to live, what to do with insurance proceeds and how to handle investments should be considered at a later time.

1. Talk to a lawyer — either a friend or the person who drew up your will. You'll generally need help in such matters as having the will probated and settling the estate. Where there's no will, the court will appoint someone to handle the property. If you yourself have no will, you should draw one up with reasonable speed so that, should anything happen to you, the property you've inherited will be properly distributed.

2. If your husband has left no list of where his important papers are, you'll have to hunt them out yourself. Search closets, desk drawers and safe deposit boxes for such things as insurance policies, bank books, business agreements, membership cards, deeds, income tax forms, military records, and so forth. Don't throw away anything that looks official or that you don't understand — it may entitle you to some benefit you knew nothing about.

3. File the life insurance claim (for this, as for other benefits, you'll need a copy of the death certificate, so get at least a dozen of them). There are various ways to take the insurance proceeds — in a lump sum, in regular annuity payments over your lifetime or in installment payments at various periods. It's often best to take what you need of the proceeds right away, then park the rest in an interest-bearing account with the insurance company while you decide what to do with it.

4. File for Social Security benefits; there's a $255 burial allowance, as well as whatever monthly income you're entitled to. This should be done immediately. The agency will pay back benefits as long as you file within a year, but if you delay any longer you'll lose your first year's payments. It takes around two months for a routine Social Security claim to be processed once you've sent in all the relevant documents. Your Social Security office will tell you what's needed.

5. File for any other benefits you have coming — from Civil Service, the Railroad Retirement Act, your husband's company, the Veterans Administration, and any clubs or fraternal organizations where your husband might have had an insurance policy.

You may not know whether in fact you're entitled to any benefits from these sources but always write and ask. Tell them your husband has died, give details on his employment or memberships, and ask if you or your children are entitled to any benefits. If you think you are, but are having trouble collecting, ask a lawyer to help.

6. Gather all current bills for payment; some of the installment contracts may include life insurance that pays them off. Visit the bank to get all joint accounts transferred to your name, and also set about transferring ownership of all property, such as the car. The companies that insure the car and the house also must be informed that your husband has died and that you are now the sole owner.

7. If you need help and can't afford to pay for it, check the phone book for social service organizations — either in the Yellow Pages or under your city or county listings. You should be able to find someone who'll show you how to file claims and collect benefits. There are also various organizations that can provide a family with special help during the period they're waiting to receive their permanent benefits.

Output Up In June

WASHINGTON (AP)-The Federal Reserve Board reported Tuesday that the output of the nation's factories, mines and utilities increased in June for the first time in nine months.

A government economist said that in light of other recent developments, the increase is pretty clear evidence the economy is starting to recover.

The board said that its index of industrial prooduction rose 0.4% in June on the strength of increased production of consumer goods and nondurable industrial materials. The increase was the largest since a 0.6% rise in May 1974.

James L. Pate, top ecopnomist in the Commerce Department, said the increase was in line with what administration economists have been expecting.

"While small, in conjunction with other evidence we are seeing, this is pretty clear evidence the economy is starting to recover," Pate said.

Combining Monday's report of a record decrease in the backlog of stocks held by manufacturers and merchants with the increase in industrial output, "we now have the way cleared for a resumption of increased prooduction," he said.

Pate said he expects an even larger advance in industrial output for July. However, he saiid he still expects that any significant decrease in unemployment will not come before late this year.

The industrial output began falling in November 1973, then vaccilated for several months before plunging steeply in September.

The latest increase, although not conclusive evidence that a recovery is under way, is the strongest evidence yet of such a turnaround.

Ford Man Proposes Extensions In Unemployment Compensation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Extension of unemployment compensation were proposed Tuesday by the Ford administration, including covering six million more workers and guaranteeing most unemployed persons at least half their regular pay.

The proposal, which would increase the tax paid by employers to finance the system, was presented by Labor Secretary John T. Dunlop to a House Ways and Means subcommittee. The proposal does not suggest the length of time the benefits would continue.

The plan was proposed as a short-range means of coping with the problems of the unemployment insurance system, currently running at a deficit because of high unemployment.

On a long-term basis, Dunlop recommended creating a National Commission on Unemployment Insurance to recommend basic changes.

The proposal put forth Tuesday would bring into the system about 720,000 workers in large farm operations, about 330,000 domestic workers and 4.7 million state and local government workers. Some of these are currently covered by temporary provisions.

Stock Market Climbs To 15-Month High

NEW YORK (AP) — Evidence of a developing upturn in the economy helped lift the stock market to a new 15-month closing high in heavy trading Tuesday

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials gained 5.95 to 881 81, its highest close since it finished at 883 68 on March 26, 1974.

The previous closing peak for the closely watched average had come at 878.99 on June 30.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines 978 to 536 among the 1,883 traded on the Big Board.

Brokers said the driving force behind the gains was a carryover of enthusiasm over Monday's report by the Commerce Department that business inventories had fallen a record $2.97 billion in May.

The general view among analysts is that such a clearing out of the pipelines of the economy is a necessary prelude to a pickup in production.

Optimism on the economic outlook was reinforced late in Tuesday's session by the Federal Reserve Board's report that industrial production rose in June for the f rst time in nine months.

But by that time some profit taking had begun to appear, and the Dow settled back a bit from its midafternoon high of nearly plus-7.

Lee Enterprises Net Up 37.9%

Davenport, Iowa (AP) — Lee Enterprises, Inc., has reported a 37 9 per cent increase in net income for the third quarter ended June 30.

Lee President Lloyd G. Schermer said Monday the company had a third-quarter net income of $1,947,000, or 59 cents per common share, compared with $1,412,000, or 42 cents per share for the same period last year.

Operating revenue for the third quarter increased 14 2 per cent to $14,430,000, Schermer said.

Lincoln School Board To Appeal Maternity Leave Pay Ruling

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Board of Education will appeal a Nebraska Equal Opportunity Commission (NEOC) ruling that the board discriminated against a teacher in a maternity leave care.

The board Tuesday let stand its April action, authorizing on appeal to Lancaster District Court, if necessary after an unfavorable NEOC decision.

The commission on June 25 ruled that denying sick leave benefits to English teacher Janis Ristow during her pregnancy leave in 1974 violates the State Fair Employment Practices Act.

The NEOC ordered the board to pay Mrs. Ristow, of 5621 Bristol Court, about $980 in accumulated sick leave pay and to revise the board policy on sick leave as it relates to pregnancy.

Board attorney Edwin C. Perry said he will appeal the decision before the deadline on June 25.

That decision also ordered the board to pay Mrs. Ristow's attorney fees and court report costs; no sum was stipulated. Perry noted "There is no statutory basis" for the NEOC to order such payment, as allowed in district court.

Thus, Perry said, aside from the sick leave issue, he'd recommend filing the appeal "if for no other reason than" the NEOC's questionable fees order.

Perry again reiterated that the NEOC finding "has not addressed the question of how you pay sick leave during non-paid leave," a category which includes maternity leave.

In a related action, the board approved a new policy to comply with Title IX of the 1972 Education Amendments, prohibiting sex discrimination in federally assisted education programs.

"I't's pretty clear from the guidelines," for Title IX, Supt. John Prasch said, that "we will need to rewrite our pregenancy leave policies."

He noted it "could be a financial burden on the district." But Board President Lou Roper said, "Teachers are going to be the losers in the deal."

Roper explained that of 58 teachers on maternity leave, "half are in their second year of maternity leave." The district allows extended, non-paid maternity leave—job security with resumption of work at the same level and pay at the teacher's discretion.

"We've been very reasonable in providing a job that we held while they were gone for child-rearing," Roper said. But if the board eliminates maternity leave and must rewrite its policy to award paid sick leave, that could require an immediate return to work following a short convalescence after childbirth.

Meanwhile, the board is awaiting a Nebraska Supreme Court decision on a similar Omaha case involving Evelyn Richards. The high court appeal was made on an issue unrelated to the Lincoln case; however, a companion ruling by Douglas County District Court in essence uphold the Lincoln board's position denying sick leave benefits during pregnancy leave.

If the Supreme Court does not address the latter question, the Lincoln board may still have to pursue its appeal, said Robert F. Peterson, executive director of the Lincoln Education Association. The LEA is supporting Mrs. Ristow's test case. However, the high court's Richards ruling might decide the Lincoln case.

Prasch meanwhile directed Gayle Hurlbert, personnel department administrative assistant, to review the district sick leave policy "and determine what changes we need to make."

That role coincides with her board appointment Tuesday as coordinator of compliance efforts with Title IX guidelines. They'll go into effect on Monday, unless changed by Congress.

The board's Title IX policy creates a task force of four school employes, four lay citizens, four students and one board member. The group will examine current school policies and practices, and report its findings and recommendations on possible sex discrimination by March 1, 1976.

Prasch noted that the federal rules provide one to three years for implemenation. The new local policy is a first step toward an expanded one later.

"It generally seems we're in pretty good shape" in satisfying the requirements, Prasch said, pointing out expansion of girls' athletics and opening all courses to students of both sexes.

"We may have some minor problems" in intramurals and secondary physical education, he said. Now, for example, only girls are offered volleyball.

Another possible problem area is equal facilities for boys' and girls' sports if the rules eventually allow them to be separate, Prasch said.

History Project Not Dry

If some parents are already tiring of the bicentennial push from television to advertising gimmicks, Lincoln students won't have to worry about getting 200 years of dry history crammed down their throats.

Instead, their learning will be "activity-oriented," says Ruth Weatherl, curriculum project director of "Nebraska at the 200th Year."

The project will also be "present-oriented, with dips into the past," she told the Lincoln Board of Education Tuesday.

By first examining today's houses, for example, then comparing them to homes 200 years ago, kids can more readily identify materials, traditions held in homes and family values that have emanated from them, she said.

The three project themes relate the individual to the local community, Nebraska heritage and the American heritage, she said. Mrs. Weatherl's work developing packets the past year has been paid by a State Education Department grant.

Travel In State

Serving Lincoln's Educational Service Unit 18, she'll also travel throughout Nebraska, teaching teachers how to offer the program in social studies classes.

In a series of self-exploration exercises, children will look at themselves and their family backgrounds, learn how values play in how they make decisions, and see how those fit into a society that's lasted 200 years.

Each Lincoln school has a bicentennial representative. All elementary schools and seven junior highs will spend a day in the one-room school at the State Fairgrounds. After a lesson in class, the youngsters will attend school as it as 70 to 100 years ago.

The board also heard a report on "Man: A Course of Study," a year-long course for 6th-graders which examines American culture by studying contrasts in others and behavior in the animal world.

Some of the program materials depict what some consider cruelty to animals, practices such as eating what Americans consider unappetizing and lifestyles of Eskimos. Thus, there have been complaints nationally and in Congress about spending federal dollars to develop "Man."

May Be Objectionable

Mrs. Weatherl, who has taught the course in Lincoln, and Neal Cross, social studies consultant, agreed the material can be objectionable if taken out of context.

Both strongly supported "Man," based on the entire learning experience it offers and its successes with students. Cross cited evidence of "Man" graduates' enlightened "acceptance of others," and the study assisting them in later courses.

"Man" examines humans, animal interdependence, learned and innate behavior, sense of territory, importance of families, structure, function, dominance and aggression.

Lincoln began using "Man" in 1969-70. Teachers must take a 40-hour seminar or work for a year as a partner with a trained teacher. Twenty schools will use the course this fall; six others which use it rotate "Man" annually with another course.

In other business, the board:

—Appointed Carol Nemeroff, 28, as Everett Junior High principal. A consultant with the State Education Department since 1972, she holds a masters degree in education from Boston University and completed a six-year specialist program in education admininstration at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

—Approved bids by printers for school newspaper and yearbook contracts under a new policy, giving the district business office more control over merchandise and relieving individual schools' responsibilitites.

Widows Urged To Be Patient

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — Widows are often at a loss as far as financial matters are concerned. Dozens of things must be attended to in the weeks following a husband's death, and dozens of decisions made.

Yet to the extent that a new widow is inexperienced in handling money, these things are puzzling, even threatening. Nor is she in emotional shape to make decisions that will affect her far into the future.

Lawyers, relatives and friends will cluster around, offering advice and laying out options. In some cases, hasty action will seem necessary. But given her emotional stress, a widow often sees money matters as trivial, something to be left to others while she absorbs herself in her grief. She may let her children or friends make important decisions for her. This she could live to regret.

The best counsel a widow can have in the weeks and months after her husband's death is to be patient. She should file immediately for whatever benefits she's entitled to, but make no final decisions as to the disposition of assets.

Younger widows, especially, have no idea what direction their lives may take, or what they'll have to do to provide for themselves and their children. Older widows are more settled and may even have discussed with their husbands such things as what to do with insurance proceeds. But even they should advance slowly into this phase of their lives.

Here is a brief checklist of what a widow has to attend to first. All other decisions, such as where to live, what to do with insurance proceeds and how to handle investments should be considered at a later time

1. Talk to a lawyer — either a friend or the person who drew up your will. You'll generally need help in such matters as having the will probated and settling the estate. Where there's no will, the court will appoint someone to handle the property. If you yourself have no will, you should draw one up with reasonable speed so that, should anything happen to you, the property you've inherited will be properly distributed.

2. If your husband has left no list of where his important papers are, you'll have to hunt them out yourself. Search closets, desk drawers and safe deposit boxes for such things as insurance policies, bank books, business agreements, membership cards, deeds, income tax forms, military records, and so forth. Don't throw away anything that looks official or that you don't understand — it may entitle you to some benefit you knew nothing about.

3. File the life insurance claim (for this, as for other benefits, you'll need a copy of the death certificate, so get at least a dozen of them). There are various ways to take the insurance proceeds — in a lump sum, in regular annuity payments over your lifetime or in installment payments at various periods. It's often best to take what you need of the proceeds right away, then park the rest in an interest-bearing account with the insurance company while you decide what to do with it.

4. File for Social Security benefits; there's a $255 burial allowance, as well as whatever monthly income you're entitled to. This should be done immediately. The agency will pay back benefits as long as you file within a year, but if you delay any longer you'll lose your first year's payments. It takes around two months for a routine Social Security claim to be processed once you've sent in all the relevant documents. Your Social Security office will tell you what's needed.

5. File for any other benefits you have coming — from Civil Service, the Railroad Retirement Act, your husband's company, the Veterans Administration, and any clubs or fraternal organizations where your husband might have had an insurance policy.

You may not know whether in fact you're entitled to any benefits from these sources but always write and ask. Tell them your husband has died, give details on his employment or memberships, and ask if you or your children are entitled to any benefits. If you think you are, but are having trouble collecting, ask a lawyer to help.

6. Gather all current bills for payment, some of the installment contracts may include life insurance that pays them off. Visit the bank to get all joint accounts transferred to your name, and also set about transferring ownership of all property, such as the car. The companies that insure the car and the house also must be informed that your husband has died and that you are now the sole owner.

7. If you need help and can't afford to pay for it, check the phone book for social service organizations — either in the Yellow Pages or under your city or county listings. You should be able to find someone who'll show you how to file claims and collect benefits. There are also various organizations that can provide a family with special help during the period they're waiting to receive their permanent benefits.

Output Up In June

WASHINGTON (AP)-The Federal Reserve Board reported Tuesday that the output of the nation's factories, mines and utilities increased in June for the first time in nine months.

A government economist said that in light of other recent developments, the increase is pretty clear evidence the economy is starting to recover.

The board said that its index of industrial prooduction rose 0.4% in June on the strength of increased production of consumer goods and nondurable industrial materials. The increase was the largest since a 0.6% rise in May 1974.

James L. Pate, top econnomist in the Commerce Department, said the increase was in line with what administration economists have been expecting.

"While small, in conjunction with other evidence we are seeing, this is pretty clear evidence the economy is starting to recover," Pate said.

Combining Monday's report of a record decrease in the backlog of stocks held by manufacturers and merchants with the increase in industrial output, "we now have the way cleared for a resumption of increased prooduction," he said.

Pate said he expects an even larger advance in industrial output for July. However, he saiid he still expects that any significant decrease in unemployment will not come before late this year.

The industrial output began falling in November 1973, then vaccilated for several months before plunging steeply in September.

The latest increase, although not conclusive evidence that a recovery is under way, is the strongest evidence yet of such a turnaround.

Ford Man Proposes Extensions In Unemployment Compensation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Extension of unemployment compensation were proposed Tuesday by the Ford administration, including covering six million more workers and guaranteeing most unemployed persons at least half their regular pay.

The proposal, which would increase the tax paid by employers to finance the system, was presented by Labor Secretary John T. Dunlop to a House Ways and Means subcommittee. The proposal does not suggest the length of time the benefits would continue.

The plan was proposed as a short-range means of coping with the problems of the unemployment insurance system, currently running at a deficit because of high unemployment.

On a long-term basis, Dunlop recommended creating a National Commission on Unemployment Insurance to recommend basic changes.

The proposal put forth Tuesday would bring into the system about 720,000 workers in large farm operations, about 330,000 domestic workers and 4.7 million state and local government workers. Some of these are currently covered by temporary provisions.

Lincoln School Board To Appeal Maternity Leave Pay Ruling

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Board of Education will appeal a Nebraska Equal Opportunity Commission (NEOC) ruling that the board discriminated against a teacher in a maternity leave care.

The board Tuesday let stand its April action, authorizing on appeal to Lancaster District Court, if necessary after an unfavorable NEOC decision.

The commission on June 25 ruled that denying sick leave benefits to English teacher Janis Ristow during her pregnancy leave in 1974 violates the State Fair Employment Practices Act.

The NEOC ordered the board to pay Mrs. Ristow, of 5621 Bristol Court, about $980 in accumulated sick leave pay and to revise the board policy on sick leave as it relates to pregnancy.

Board attorney Edwin C. Perry said he will appeal the decision before the deadline on June 25.

That decision also ordered the board to pay Mrs. Ristow's attorney fees and court report costs; no sum was stipulated. Perry noted "There is no statutory basis" for the NEOC to order such payment, as allowed in district court.

Thus, Perry said, aside from the sick leave issue, he'd recommend filing the appeal "if for no other reason than" the NEOC's questionable fees order.

Perry again reiterated that the NEOC finding "has not addressed the question of how you pay sick leave during non-paid leave," a category which includes maternity leave.

In a related action, the board approved a new policy to comply with Title IX of the 1972 Education Amendments, prohibiting sex discrimination in federally assisted education programs.

"It's pretty clear from the guidelines," for Title IX, Supt. John Prasch said, that "we will need to rewrite our pregenancy leave policies."

He noted it "could be a financial burden on the district." But Board President Lou Roper said, "Teachers are going to be the losers in the deal."

Roper explained that of 58 teachers on maternity leave, "half are in their second year of maternity leave." The district allows extended, non-paid maternity leave—job security with resumption of work at the same level and pay at the teacher's discretion.

"We've been very reasonable in providing a job that we held while they were gone for child-rearing," Roper said. But if the board eliminates maternity leave and must rewrite its policy to award paid sick leave, that could require an immediate return to work following a short convalescence after childbirth.

Meanwhile, the board is awaiting a Nebraska Supreme Court decision on a similar Omaha case involving Evelyn Richards. The high court appeal was made on an issue unrelated to the Lincoln case; however, a companion ruling by Douglas County District Court in essence uphold the Lincoln board's position denying sick leave benefits during pregnancy leave.

If the Supreme Court does not address the latter question, the Lincoln board may still have to pursue its appeal, said Robert F. Peterson, executive director of the Lincoln Education Association. The LEA is supporting Mrs. Ristow's test case. However, the high court's Richards ruling might decide the Lincoln case.

Prasch meanwhile directed Gayle Hurlbert, personnel department administrative assistant, to review the district sick leave policy "and determine what changes we need to make."

That role coincides with her board appointment Tuesday as coordinator of compliance efforts with Title IX guidelines. They'll go into effect on Monday, unless changed by Congress.

The board's Title IX policy creates a task force of four school employes, four lay citizens, four students and one board member. The group will examine current school policies and practices, and report its findings and recommendations on possible sex discrimination by March 1, 1976.

Prasch noted that the federal rules provide one to three years for implemenation. The new local policy is a first step toward an expanded one later.

"It generally seems we're in pretty good shape" in satisfying the requirements, Prasch said, pointing out expansion of girls' athletics and opening all courses to students of both sexes.

"We may have some minor problems" in intramurals and secondary physical education, he said. Now, for example, only girls are offered volleyball.

Another possible problem area is equal facilities for boys' and girls' sports if the rules eventually allow them to be separate, Prasch said.

History Project Not Dry

If some parents are already tiring of the bicentennial push from television to advertising gimmicks, Lincoln students won't have to worry about getting 200 years of dry history crammed down their throats.

Instead, their learning will be "activity-oriented," says Ruth Weatherl, curriculum project director of "Nebraska at the 200th Year."

The project will also be "present-oriented, with dips into the past," she told the Lincoln Board of Education Tuesday.

By first examining today's houses, for example, then comparing them to homes 200 years ago, kids can more readily identify materials, traditions held in homes and family values that have emanated from them, she said.

The three project themes relate the individual to the local community, Nebraska heritage and the American heritage, she said. Mrs. Weatherl's work developing packets the past year has been paid by a State Education Department grant.

Travel In State

Serving Lincoln's Educational Service Unit 18, she'll also travel throughout Nebraska, teaching teachers how to offer the program in social studies classes.

In a series of self-exploration exercises, children will look at themselves and their family backgrounds, learn how values play in how they make decisions, and see how those fit into a society that's lasted 200 years.

Each Lincoln school has a bicentennial representative. All elementary schools and seven junior highs will spend a day in the one-room school at the State Fairgrounds. After a lesson in class, the youngsters will attend school as it as 70 to 100 years ago.

The board also heard a report on "Man: A Course of Study," a year-long course for 6th-graders which examines American culture by studying contrasts in others and behavior in the animal world.

Some of the program materials depict what some consider cruelty to animals, practices such as eating what Americans consider unappetizing and lifestyles of Eskimos. Thus, there have been complaints nationally and in Congress about spending federal dollars to develop "Man."

May Be Objectionable

Mrs. Weatherl, who has taught the course in Lincoln, and Neal Cross, social studies consultant, agreed the material can be objectionable if taken out of context.

Both strongly supported "Man," based on the entire learning experience it offers and its successes with students. Cross cited evidence of "Man" graduates' enlightened "acceptance of others," and the study assisting them in later courses.

"Man" examines humans, animal interdependence, learned and innate behavior, sense of territory, importance of families, structure, function, dominance and aggression.

Lincoln began using "Man" in 1969-70. Teachers must take a 40-hour seminar or work for a year as a partner with a trained teacher. Twenty schools will use the course this fall; six others which use it rotate "Man" annually with another course.

In other business, the board:

—Appointed Carol Nemeroff, 28, as Everett Junior High principal. A consultant with the State Education Department since 1972, she holds a masters degree in education from Boston University and completed a six-year specialist program in education admininstration at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

—Approved bids by printers for school newspaper and yearbook contracts under a new policy, giving the district business office more control over merchandise and relieving individual schools' responsibilities.

is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast for Wednesday

Travel month indicated for Sagittarius in August. The native will exchange ideas, socialize, perhaps study a new language and will travel, more so than in recent past. Those born under this zodiacal sign receive some rare opportunities next month. Key is to be ready, to accept, to find the challenge acceptable, to expand horizons and refuse to be stopped by barriers, real or otherwise. The outlook, in August, is exciting and bright for those born under the ninth sign, Sagittarius.!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Concern with the occult — or hidden matters — tends to dominate. Get to heart of matters. Be independent, direct. Put cards on table, face up — and this applies especially where opposite sex enters picture. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lie low. Defer to judgment of partner, mate. Time is on your side. You can successfully play waiting game. Accent is on public relations, legal affairs, cooperative efforts — and marriage. Hunch pays dividends if you follow through in deliberate manner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Spotlight is on basic service, health, employment, the activities of relatives. Diversify. Be versatile without scattering efforts. Don't neglect diet, health resolutions. You must take care of yourself if you expect any other person to "give a care." You do understand!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good Moon aspect coincides now with change, creative activities, children and love. You will be aroused into action, political, emotional or otherwise. Remodeling is on agenda. You become familiar with sources. You know what to do, when to do it — and whom to contact.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You find that the truth does make you strong. Keynote is to get to heart of affairs, to be specific, to insist on factual information as contrasted to rumor, promise or speculation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Neighbors and relatives are in picture as domestic situation is highlighted. You gain insights to family situation. You gain through intelligent concessions. Taurus and Libra figure prominently. A short trip brings desired results — and you should write that letter!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent on what is of value and what can "profitably" be discarded. You gain greater insights where values are concerned. Debts are paid, collected. You take stock and learn lessons of credits, debits. Pisces, Virgo could be very much in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Lunar cycle is at peak; take initiative, make fresh starts and new contacts. Highlight independence, personality and personal appearance. Express opinions in creative manner. You will be dealing from position of strength. Be confident, not arrogant.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A relationship is tested. You finish or find a new beginning. There are not likely to be halfway measures. Subtle approach to any problem brings better results than direct onslaught. Know it and act like you are aware of it. Avoid direct confrontations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Study Capricorn message for valid hints. Emphasis on career, basic goals, relationships with professional superiors. You are able now to rise above minor obstacles. Your own "touch" brings desired results. You gain accolade from one you respect.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on far-reaching projects; special educational or language courses, journeys and correspondence. You regain spiritual balance — and you learn who cares as contrasted to who gives lip service.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you're introspective, perfectionist, loyal to profession and family. You are sensitive, articulate, have tendency to brood and to draw to you persons who take advantage without giving anything in return. Those who "understand" you are few but valuable allies. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. August will be your most significant month this year, a year in which you will end a major cycle and complete a meaningful project.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
